TEN FEET OF WATER IN TOISHAN CITY

SHANGHAI HEAT WAVE DEATHS

Kongmoon, June 26.
As the result of torrential rains in the past few days, the city of Toishan is being submerged in some places to a depth of more than ten feet.

Numerous houses, bridges, roads and other means of communication have been wrecked, including a section of the Ning-Yang railway and the telephone, telegraph and electric light systems.

The city was plunged into darkness for almost twenty hours on Sunday.

Three railway bridges were carried off by the flood, while numerous sleepers were destroyed. Railway communication cannot be restored to Toishan for several days.

The losses sustained by the Ning-Yang Railroad company alone are estimated at over $150,000.

The flood is now showing signs of receding.—Central News.

SHANGHAI HEAT WAVE.

Shanghai, June 27.
Cases of sunstroke and heat prostration are mounting up in consequence of the persistence of record-breaking high temperatures in Shanghai and the surrounding districts. Scores of sufferers from prostration and sun stroke have been stricken in the countryside, mostly farmers and coolies, threatening to create a serious situation.—Central News.

YELLOW RIVER FLOODS.

Tientsin, June 27.
The continued rise of the Yellow River, especially the section running across Hopei Province, has caused widespread floods at several points in that province. The districts already flooded include Fengyu, Huangling and Pantang, where thousands of refugees are in need of immediate relief.

The Hopei Provincial Government has urged the Yellow River Conservancy Bureau to take emergency measures to strengthen dykes in order to prevent an extension of the flood disaster.—Central News.

SIX DEATHS.

Shanghai, June 27.
The heat wave caused six deaths in Shanghai from heatstroke yesterday, although a strong breeze brought some relief. The populace took advantage of a burst, twenty-inch water-main near the General Hospital which turned the vicinity into a lake. There has been a general abatement of crime in the last two days. There have been no armed robberies and no street fights.—Reuter.

LOCAL CAPTAIN DIVORCED

WIFE'S PETITION IN ENGLAND

AN UNDEFENDED SUIT

On the grounds that her husband, Capt. Joseph Crosthwaite, had committed misconduct with a Chinese girl in Hongkong, Mrs. Winifred Mary Crosthwaite, who gave her address as Empress Avenue, The Drive, Ilford, was granted an undefended petition in the Divorce Court last month before the President, Sir Boyd Merriam.

During the hearing it was stated that the parties were married at Hackney Register Office on September 25, 1918, and later came to live in Hongkong. Mrs. Crosthwaite returned to England for a time in 1930, and on her return to the Colony found that her husband had committed misconduct with a Chinese girl.

Mrs. Crosthwaite was given the custody of the two children of the marriage.

New York, June 26.
Mrs. Gene Tunney, the wife of the famous unbeaten ex-champion boxer of the world, to-day gave birth to a son.

The baby weighed 8 lbs. 4 ozs., a strapping youngster. Both mother and son are doing well.

Mrs. Tunney was formerly Miss Josephine Lauder, of Greenwich, Conn., a grand-niece of Andrew Carnegie and heiress to the $10,000,000 fortune of Mr. George Lauder.

They were married in Rome in October, 1928, and this is the first child of the union.—United Press.

REPRISALS THREAT

ANGLO-GERMAN DISPUTE

DIMMER HOPE OF AGREEMENT

London, June 26.
Hopes of an amicable settlement of the Anglo-German debt dispute have been dimmed by the nature of a statement issued in Berlin prior to the departure for London of the German delegation.

The German Government regrets, the statement declared, that it is unable to accept the arguments of Britain which seems partially to have been based upon a misunderstanding of the proceedings at the Berlin transfer conference.

The German Government also regrets that the British Government thinks it necessary to enforce its viewpoint by threatening compulsory measures, whereby Germany is compelled to take corresponding defensive measures.

The German debt delegates have since arrived in London, driving to a hotel from Liverpool Street in a taxicab driven, strangely enough, by a Jewish driver.—Reuter.

BRITAIN'S NEGOTIATOR.

Sir Frederick Leith Ross, Chief Economic Adviser to the Government, accompanied by Treasury officials, will conduct the negotiations on behalf of the British Government with the German delegation respecting the German transfer moratorium.

The German representatives who will include Dr. Berger, of the Ministry of Finance, Dr. Ulrich, of the Economic Department of the Foreign Office, and Dr. Blessing, a Director of the Reichsbank, will be invited to hold the first meeting at the Treasury to-morrow morning.

BILL PASSES COMMONS.

The Money Resolution in connection with the Debt Clearing Office and Import Restrictions (Reprisals) Bill, passed all stages in the Commons to-day. When the House went into committee on the bill, a Liberal member moved an amendment to limit its duration to twelve months from last July next.

This, he said, would be a gesture to Germany that the British would be prepared not to engage in reprisals but would rather do everything possible to facilitate and increase Anglo-German trade.

The motion was, however, withdrawn when the Chancellor of Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, announced his willingness to limit the operation of the measure to two years.

The Chancellor remarked that the Government's purpose in taking the powers contained in the bill was to give notice to the world that they were not equipped and thereby to reduce the likelihood of circumstances arising which would require these powers to be used.—British Wireless.

PACE TOO HOT FOR THE GOLF VETERANS

BRITISH OPEN QUALIFIERS

LOWEST LIMIT ON RECORD

BERT GADD LEADS

London, June 26.
The pace set in the qualifying rounds of the British Open Golf Championship to-day was too hot for the majority of Britain's most famous veterans of the course.

At least six former holders of the title, including George Duncan, James Braid, E. Ray, Arthur Havers, Herd and White, were among the eliminated.

Players were scores of 152 or better alone qualified for the final stage. This in itself is indicative of the standard of golf put up, which was little short of magnificent. The qualifying point of 152 is the lowest in the long history of the championship.

Bert Gadd, of Brandhall, Birmingham, led the field at the close of the day. He was brilliantly consistent throughout, returning a card of 70 for the Royal Cinque Ports course at Deal and a card of 69 for the St. George's course at Sandwich.

Henry Cotton who broke the Cinque Ports record with a round of 66 had a bad time at Deal, but occupied equal second place with Percy Alliss and James Adams (Ireland) both of whom set up new records for the Deal course, with cards of 67.

The American challengers all qualified, but not one of them was at all convincing.

PROMINENT AMATEURS.

The best amateur performance was put up by E. F. Storey, the former Cambridge captain, who was equal third at the end of the day.

Robert Sweeney played exceedingly good golf at Deal, and with an aggregate of 69, broke the amateur record for the course.

James Wallace, the Scottish artizan golfer, who reached the final of the British amateur open, only to be overwhelmed by the most amazing display of golf in the history of the game, by Lawson Little, could not deal with the open championship courses.

THAT ARMS EMBARGO

STILL HELD UP BY JAPAN AND ITALY

CONTRACT ISSUE

London, June 26.
Questioned as to the conditions attached by Italy to her acceptance of the arms embargo on Bolivia and Paraguay, Sir John Simon in the House to-day said he understood that the Italian Government had made their acceptance of the contemplated measure conditional upon acceptance by a number of other specified Governments.

As the Italian list included the U.S.S.R. and Japan, invitations were duly transmitted by the League Committee of Three to the Governments of these two countries to participate also.

The Government of the U.S.S.R. had announced their agreement. The position as regards Japan was that a formal agreement had not yet been given although it has been explained that no exports of arms had, in fact, been sent from Japan to Bolivia or Paraguay.

The Italian Government had also stipulated that current contracts should be exempted from the proposed embargo. This difficulty had not yet been overcome, though the League Committee of three had recommended that if such a reservation was to be made definite, a very brief time limit should be laid down during which it should be operative.

Sir John Simon added that he had no information as to the duration of existing Italian contracts.

Over thirty countries have declared their agreement in principle with the proposed arms embargo, Italy and Japan being the only two Governments on the list of those approached from which such a declaration has not, as yet, been reached.—British Wireless.

HEAVY PURCHASES PLANNED

RATIO POLICY PROGRAMME

COMPLETION BY END OF YEAR?

Washington, June 26.
Huge currency expansion by the employment of silver as legal metallic reserve, is planned as a recovery measure, according to prominent spokesmen of the government.

Members of the Administration believe that the new silver purchases plan will cause a currency expansion of at least $940,000,000, with a corresponding increase in commodity prices by the end of the present year.

This was disclosed in official quarters, after Senator Dies had announced that the Treasury Department had already bought about 70,000,000 ounces, although, he said, the exact amount could not be positively ascertained because the white metal was being purchased on American account in markets throughout the world, and the Treasury tabulations were not yet up-to-date.

It is reported elsewhere that the average price paid hitherto for silver by the Treasury has been 44 cents an ounce.

TREASURY NEEDS.

Senator Dies said the Bureau of Printing and Engraving is far behind schedule in the printing of new silver certificates to be issued on the basis of the metal.

He said he estimated that the Treasury would need to buy 1,254,000,000 ounces to comply with the new law requiring purchases until silver constitutes 25 per cent. of its monetary reserve. It is estimated that the above figure, added to what the Government already owns will give the United States about 2,000,000,000 ounces.

75 CENTS AN OUNCE.

Treasury officials arrived at their $940,000,000 estimate by multiplying 1,254,000,000 ounces by 75 cents, saying the United States would be lucky if it obtained around one-fifth of the world's total supply without paying more than an average of 75 cents an ounce.—Reuter.

TREASURY STATEMENT.

Washington, June 26.
An indication of the rate of the Treasury purchases of silver is given in an official statement of Treasury bullion transactions issued to-day.

The announcement shows that silver receipts under the executive (Continued on Page 7.)

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Heads You'll Win Style in Spring Hats!

The Breton, the bonnet, the off-the-face sailor. With these in her wardrobe, no spring style can fail her.

And true enough, these three types completely cover topper territory for the younger set. They're all very flattering to the face of youth. Although some of these hats are worn far, far to the rear, tiny elastics or ribbon ties keep them in place despite early spring breezes.

White straw cloth forms the Breton shown at the top left of the sketch. The crown has a squarish look and is banded and bowed with wide navy blue grosgrain.

To the right of this, a Buster Brownish sailor of fine black milan is banded in white grosgrain and held tightly to the head with a narrow black elastic band.

A prim little navy milan bonnet, shown at the bottom left of the sketch covers only the back of the head. A pie-crust ruffle of white milan extends across the front and ribbon ties of navy grosgrain keep it in place.

Quaint is the word for the Empire bonnet at the bottom right of beige straw. Brown ribbons trim its high square crown and its truly poke brim frames a fair face to advantage.

Hats off to off-the-face hats!

PICKLES AND CHUTNIES

Some Home-Made Examples

Pickles and chutnies lend themselves admirably to home manufacture, and should find a place on the shelves of every store cupboard.

There is unlimited scope for individual taste and ingenuity in combining different ingredients to give distinctive flavours.

Fruit and vegetables should be fresh, sound, and under rather than over ripe, and they should be washed and dried very thoroughly before using.

Fruit intended for chutney should preferably be of the acid variety, e.g., apples, plums, ripe or green tomatoes, &c.

Onion, garlic, sugar, spices, &c., are added to give flavour and piquancy, and the whole mixed with a preserving agent, e.g., vinegar.

The very best vinegar should be used for all preserving purposes. Best brown vinegar is to be recommended for all ordinary pickles and chutnies. For the more delicate preserves, the best white vinegar should be used.

A good chutney, whatever the ingredients, should have a mellow, piquant flavour, and should be of a smooth consistency. To obtain this result, all the ingredients should be very finely chopped and cooked slowly for two to three hours.

It is not advisable to add flavourings after the chutney is cooked as this spoils the smoothness of the preserve and the piquancy of the flavour.

Metal Utensils Harmful

Metal pans and utensils, particularly copper, should never be used either in the making or the storing of pickles and chutnies.

Un glazed earthenware or enamel vessels and wooden spoons are desirable and safe when vinegar is being used.

If a metal pan must be used, one made from iron produces the least injurious effects.

The preserve should be stored in glass jars so that any fermentation may be detected—these jars should be clean, dry, and hot. It is a saving to use vacuum jars as it does away with that tiresome process "fastening down."

There are many old and tried recipes for making chutney amongst them being:—

Apple or Pear Chutney
Ingredients:—1 pint vinegar, 1 lb. brown sugar, 1 lb. sultanas, 1½ lb. apples or pears, 1 lb. onions, ¼ oz. ginger, 1 teaspoonful cayenne, ¼ teaspoonful allspice, 1 tablespoonful salt.

Chop the apples or pears, onions and sultanas very finely, add sugar, ginger, cayenne, salt, and vinegar. Boil gently for three hours. Turn into warm, dry jars, and cover securely.

Tomato Chutney

Ingredients:—2 lb. tomatoes, ¼ lb. onions, 2 bananas, ½ lb. raisins, ¼ lb. preserved ginger, 1 oz. salt, 1½ lb. brown sugar, 2½ pints vinegar, ¼ oz. cayenne.

Slice tomatoes and bananas, chop onions, raisins, and ginger. Place all ingredients in a pan and boil gently until thick (30-40 minutes).

CHAPTER XXXVI

Elsa came back to work on her old schedule and, with the suddenness of a butterfly released from its net, Gypsy began to rush about whenever she was free. David was in good hands when Elsa was present. He and the clumsy but gentle-fingered maid understood each other and Gypsy could play with an easy mind. This was what she needed, she told herself, what she had been wanting.

She had known a gay, irresponsible crowd in her pre-marital days. She went back to them now. She went to cocktail parties in Greenwich Village, exhibitions of modern paintings, motion picture showings to the inner circle. She bought some new clothes and had a new, daring hair cut. In many ways she was the gay, pleasure-loving girl she had been before her marriage. She laughed a great deal. She had begun to learn the newest dancing steps. The telephone rang often these days and she would sit, drumming her fingers, trying to decide whether or not she could make that particular tea or whether Elsa could be persuaded to stay late again.

Tom said he approved of the change, although sometimes you caught a puzzled light in his eyes. This chameleon, this flushed, dark-haired young person in the well cut gray suit was curiously unlike the discouraged, pallid girl who had complained last winter of the routine of dishes, bottles and naps. Since Gypsy's return she hadn't said a single word about their old difficulties. She had behaved as though nothing had ever happened to disturb her placidity. He didn't quite understand the change but he was grateful for it.

Manlike, he was interested in and attracted by the transformation. Of course Gypsy was his girl—his wife—no matter how she looked nor what she did to herself. But, although he approved her gaiety and spirit in theory, sometimes he missed the old Gypsy with her serious talk of budgets and cheap cuts and her adorable frown over the laundry list. This girl was far too busy to bother with laundry lists. There were buttons missing from Tom's things nowadays and his brown and blue socks had holes in the toes. Often he came home in the evening to find her still away and Elsa muttering over the pots and pans, anxious to put on her big shapeless hat and remove herself to that mysterious realm from which she would emerge the next working day.

Tom would be left to give David his bottle. Presently Gypsy would flash in with a garden at her throat and the scent of cigarettes clinging to her cool, fresh cheek. "Sorry, darling. I had no idea it was so late. Ronny Burgess had a Russian violinist and it was so thrilling!"

She would tie a big apron over her sheer black frock with its frilly collar. Smiling still over the afternoon, she would serve Tom cold ham and potato chips and salad. She seldom bothered to cook much now. For one thing, the weather was growing warmer. For another, she hadn't the time and Elsa was a most indifferent chef. Besides Tom didn't care. He used to be bored, she thought now, with all those fancy messes she had prepared for him. That was little bride stuff! Well, she had got bravely over that phase.

It was thrilling—it was exhilarating to be received back into the old circle as an equal. At first people had openly patronized her. "How's the baby?" they had asked negligently. "How's motherhood?"

But they had got past that now. She was one of them. She had even joined a class in sculpture, and it was, she said, "inspiring." It was queer but the prospect of spending the summer in the apartment didn't daunt her now. Last year she had been unable to bear the very notion. But that had been because of her condition. She felt strong now and it was fun to be within reach of things. Why, if she moved to the suburbs she would miss out on all the invitations she now accepted so eagerly. No one would remember her if she buried herself in some little house on a side road.

When Tom said something about trying to find a place on the island she smiled and shook her head. "Don't bother, darling. We'll be all right. I don't mind the city any more. Besides, everyone says we're going to have a cool summer."

The puzzled look came into his eyes again and he said no more.

More often than not Gypsy encountered Hunt Gibson at these festivities. Hunt was very much the young-man-about-town at the moment and he had met these people through Sue Canavan. The more Gypsy saw of him the better she liked him. He was always so amusing. He had a grand sense of humour. You saw him on the avenue these days, broad shoulders set off to advantage by his well fitting British clothes. He swung a stick. Girls riding to the tops of buses craned their necks to see him. "Oh," they said. "Isn't he like Gary Cooper?"

He would offer Gypsy a lift uptown as they left the Eighth street studio—Ronny's or Elspeth Harris' place on Barrow street.

"Coming my way?" he would say, smiling.

Gypsy would waver. "I was going to stop at the French pastry shop on Sixth and get some brioche for breakfast."

"Well, come along. The taxi can wait, can't it?"

It was fun; it was all fun. To play at being a girl again, to pretend for a little while there were no responsibilities, no worries. Of course you always went home to the baby and Tom with a thankful feeling. It was wonderful, back of all this playing and laughing and chatting, to feel that your life was secure, settled. Just the same, the dash of freedom made Gypsy rounder, rosier, prettier than she had been in years.

She looked about her at the people she knew, the completely unfettered ones, and found that she did not envy them. Elspeth was thin, hard, nervous at 29; in love with a married man from Park avenue. Ronny had been married and divorced and so had Willa Burns and one or two of the other girls. None of them had children. She would rush into the apartment after an afternoon punctuated by frenzied chatter, scented with cigarette smoke and the dregs of a cocktail shaker. She would bury her face in the pink warmth and sweetness of David's baby neck.

"Was he good, Elsa?" "Oh, sure, he fine." Elsa would wriggle out of her apron.

"Take his curio all right?" "Yn, he eat um all up."

"Well, now I've got to settle down to business." She would hum a dance tune, looking abstractedly into the icebox. Asparagus and cold lamb and a salad; Tom would like that. She wasn't hungry. Those pate sandwiches had been so good. The door would slam. Tom would be in the doorway. "Hello, darling!"

She would smile at him in the old welcoming way and he would fold her in his long arms.

"Been painting the town again?"

"Yes. Oh, I must tell you, Ronny has the most marvellous idea."

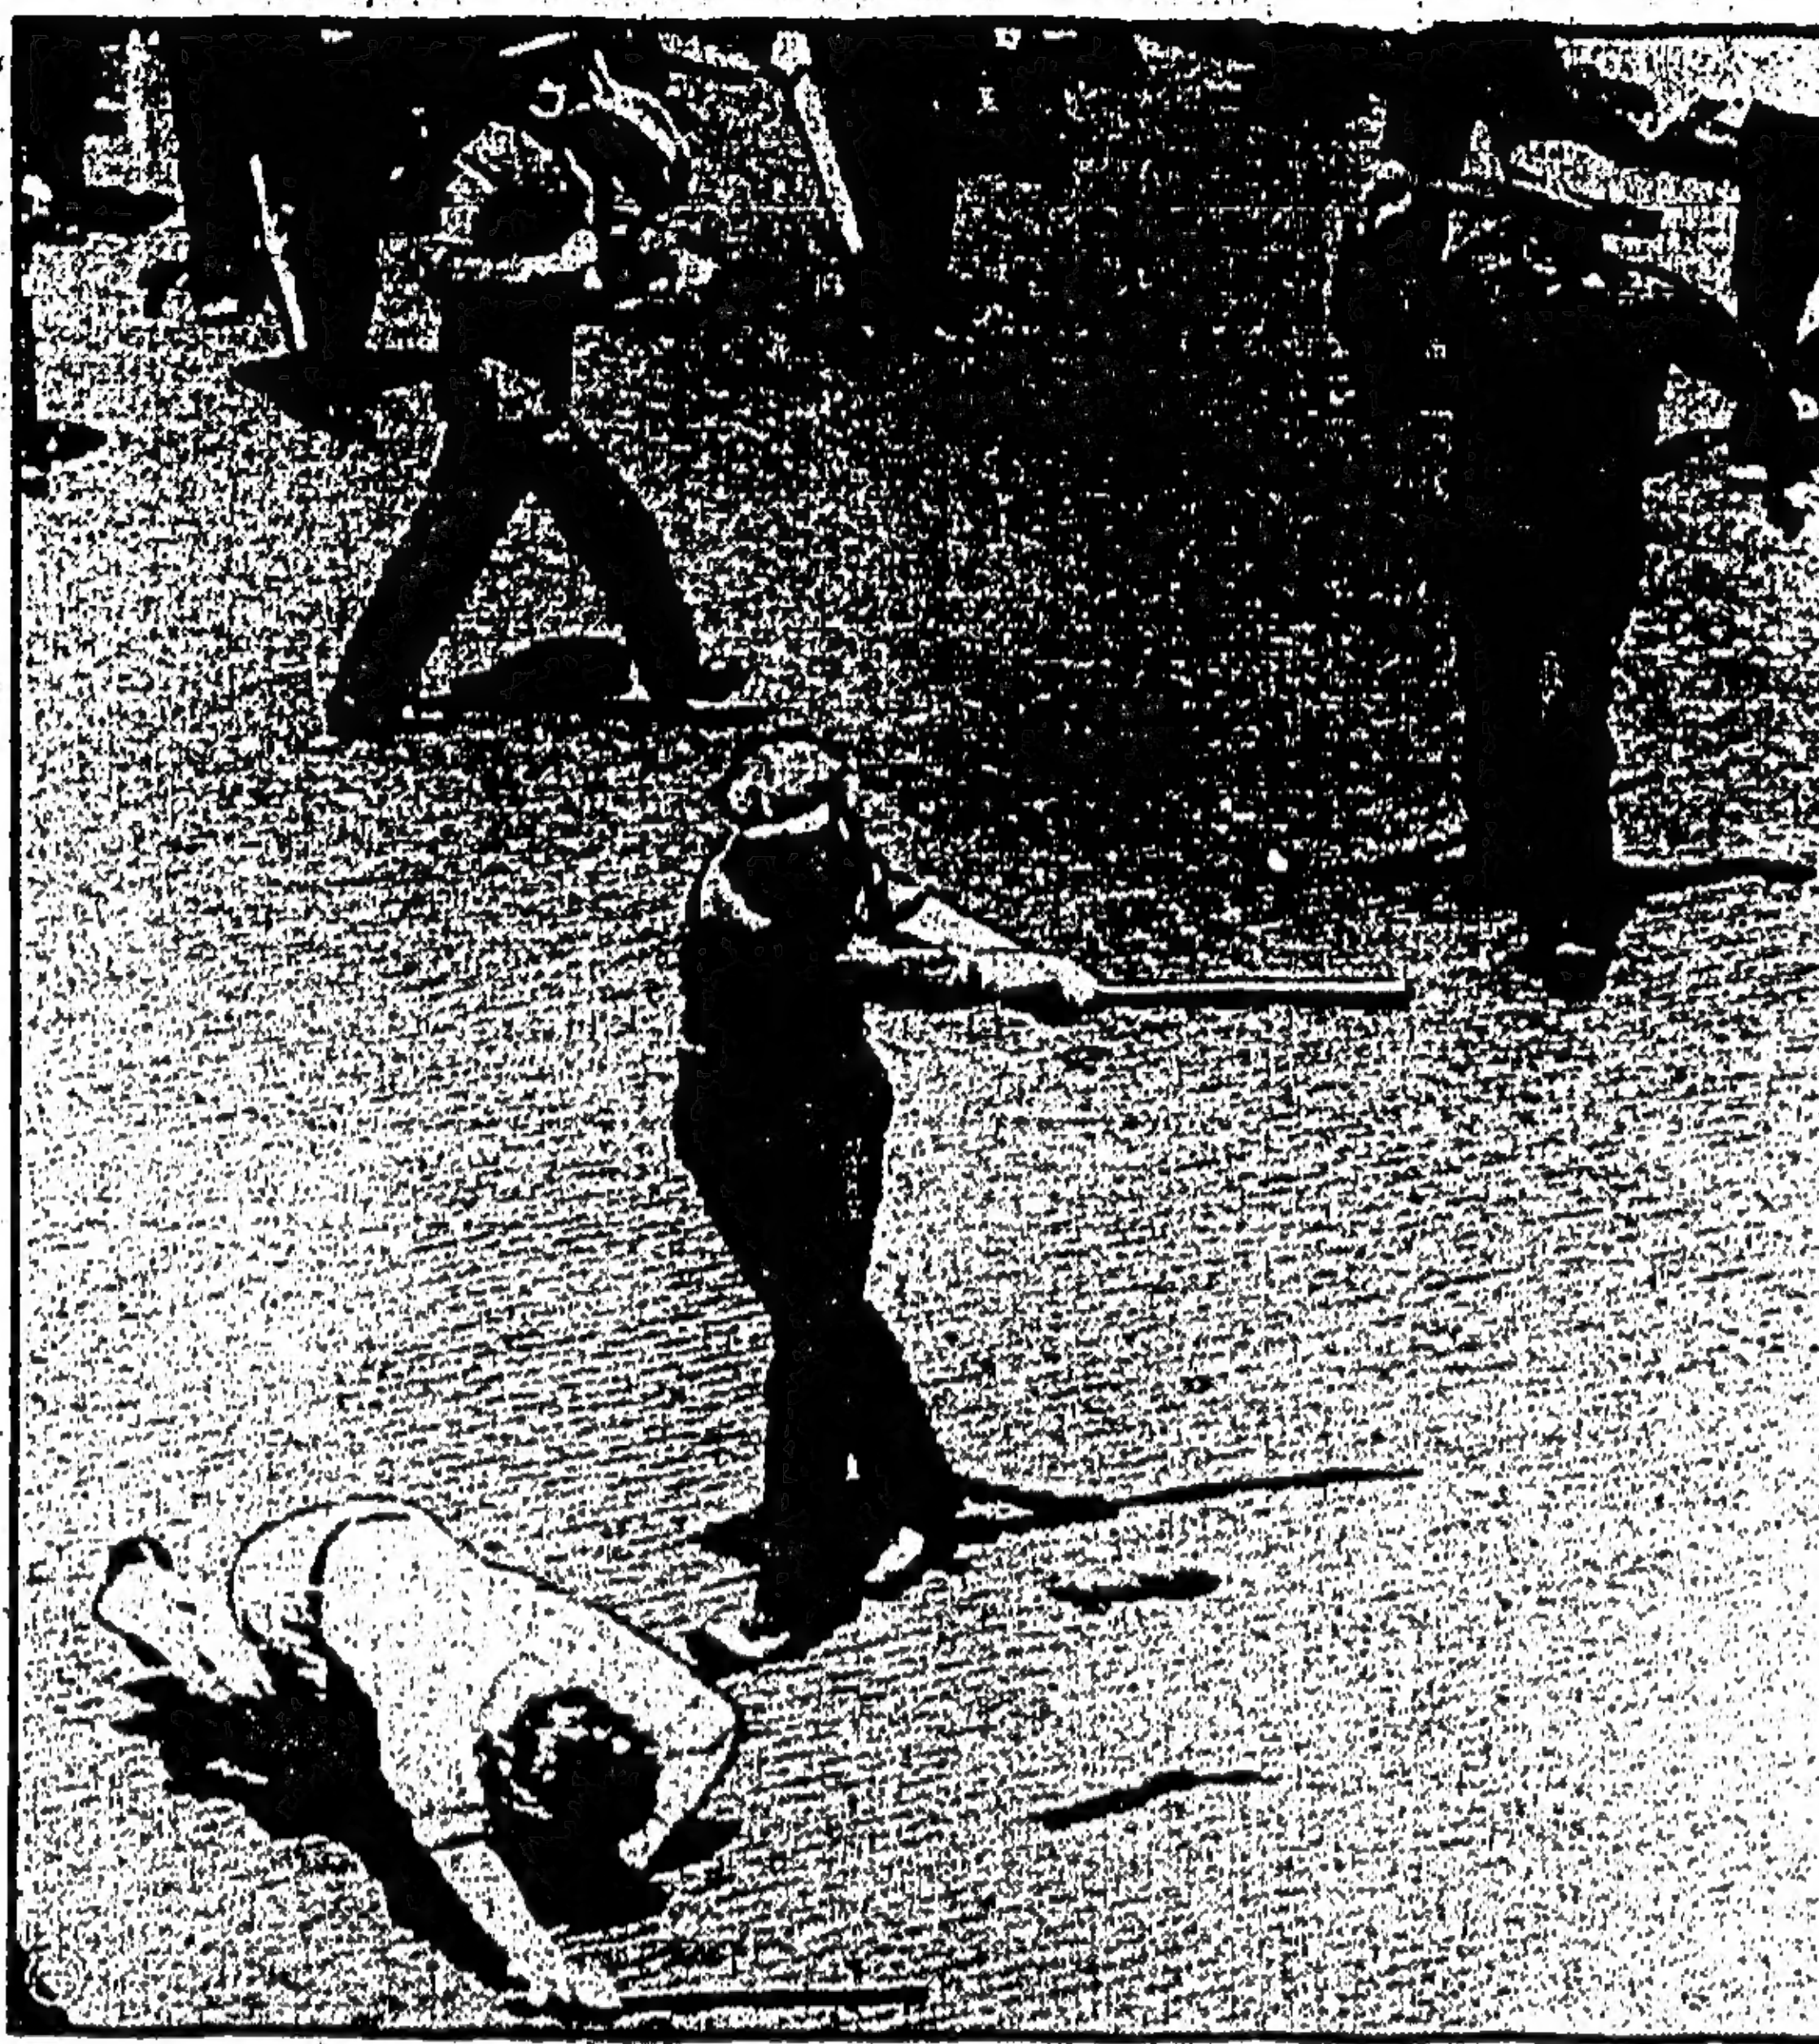

She would talk eagerly all through dinner and would not notice particularly if he were unresponsive.

"Don't you think so?"

"Umm..." Tom would stare at her, that puzzled small-boy ex-

One of the most remarkable pictures taken during the Toledo strike riots is this, showing a rioter after he had caught a smoking gas grenade flung by an Ohio guardsman and hurled it back into the troops' ranks. The picture plainly shows the grenade just after it had left his hand. In the left, through the trees, is shown part of the crowd of thousands watching the affray.

Choking clouds of gas hurled back 3,000 visitors at the Electric Auto-Lite plant in Toledo, O., as shown in this vivid picture, but they returned to maintain the siege of 1,600 strike breakers trapped in the factory building until militia arrived to clear the area. With snipers firing from nearby buildings, torpedoes being flung through windows of the plant, showers of rain right by the howling mob, and pitched battles in the streets, terror reigned for two days and nights at the plant, where $184,000 damage resulted, with scores wounded.

SEA POWER

BRITAIN DEMANDING SEVENTY CRUISERS?

London, June 26. The Admiralty is reviving its claim for 70 cruisers, in order to guarantee the sea routes of the British Empire, declares the political correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.

The correspondent quotes an entirely trustworthy American quarter for his statement, and points out that a similar demand wrecked the Three Power Naval Conference at Geneva in 1927 and seriously impaired Anglo-American relations.

The suggestion is made that Britain's present demand is much less likely to disturb the United States than in 1927, the writer asserts.

Further, it is even said that the United States will receive the demand complacently, as she is anxious now for greater freedom in view of Japan's more Imperialistic mood.

Quite apart from the 1935 Naval Conference, the early expansion of the British naval programme within Treaty limits is certain, and plans will go forward for doubling the strength of the Air Force, the Guardian says.—Reuter.

In all cases of dispute between them the Treaty provides that they will submit to arbitration.—Reuter Special.

The Cigarette with THE FILTER TIP

du MAURIER

Nicotine? Not at all. That is tobacco tar—the dark brown, semi-solid, intensely irritant product of burning leaf. You see what it does to your fingers—think what it does to your throat! That's what causes the coughing and catarrh, the burning, the dried-up feeling. . . . The filter tip of a du Maurier traps tobacco tar. Nicotine—suave enchantment—lives in the cool, full-flavoured smoke of a du Maurier cigarette. Smoke that is smoother for being unspoiled—better for being clean.

DEATH OF "NEW DIPLOMACY"

chance to express an opinion. This allegation scarcely bears examination. The ultimate arbiter of the national destiny is, and always has been, the nation; how it is influenced in its decision is another matter, but autocrats in the past have no more been able to ignore a people's will in matters of foreign policy than modern dictators can afford to. Diplomacy can never be more than an instrument, however intelligent, and to attribute to it some dark motive of its own is to ignore the facts. On the contrary, there are innumerable examples—in the history of both our own and other nations—where the advice of the professional diplomats has been rejected or neglected.

Another common gibe is that diplomacy as practised by foreign offices and ambassadors is deliberately deceitful—a Machiavellian craft based on guile and falsehood, presenting bouquets of poisonous herbs wrapped up to look like roses. Those who make this accusation evidently forget that hypocrisy is a tribute paid by vice to virtue, and that the ability to disguise unpleasant meanings in pleasant forms, and, if necessary, to suppress one's feelings altogether, is the most necessary of all civic virtues, the indispensable basis of peaceful relationships. If everybody spoke their own mind all the time life would very soon become intolerable; similarly, if Governments always expressed their exact thoughts about each other, peace would not last very long. Diplomacy between States plays the same part as good manners among private individuals; without it the nations would be reduced to warring tribes of savages.

If "style is the man," as a Frenchman claimed, the diplomatic language of a nation is the reflection of its spirit. French rationalism, English empiricism, Italian subtlety—they meet you with the unvarying expression of old friends at every turn of the complex intrigue—a comforting assurance that nothing has really changed, that nothing new can happen. This bland inevitability exasperates inexperienced nations. On the other hand the clumsiness of inexperienced nations in the age-old game is a recurrent cause of shock to the mature nations; they are embarrassed by it as grown-ups by the crudeness of an enfant terrible.

Good diplomacy has a finish, a refinement of workmanship which is acquired only as in the arts, by gradual perfectment through centuries. It cannot be learnt in a generation or two, but once evolved it is never wholly lost. Thus you will still find in dealings with diminished nations such as Spain, Portugal, or Austria, a certain quality of dignity—almost of nobility—which could be inherited only from a long past. It is the politeness of civilised people. It is to be hoped that their more virile neighbours will acquire this quality. For there was never a moment when civilised behaviour, of which the old diplomacy was the highest expression, was more necessary to prevent a lapse into barbarism than it is to-day.

ITALY'S FRUGALITY

MUSSOLINI SLASHES PUBLIC EXPENDITURE

Rome, June 26.
Signor Mussolini has adopted a simple expedient to save Italy 600,000,000 lire in public expenditure.

Recently, Il Duce instructed all Government departments to classify their expenditure under three headings: "Indispensable," "Necessary," and "Useful."

When these expenditure appropriations were submitted to him, Mussolini scrapped the "Useful" section and considerably pruned expenditure under the "Necessary" heading, thus reducing the costs by the amount necessary.—Reuter Special.

THE PHILIPPINES
COMMONWEALTH

Philippine independence will be brought a step nearer by the big conference which is to be held next week in Manila for the purpose of drawing up a Constitution which is to be established pending complete self-government. Altogether, over 200 delegates will take part in the gathering, but much of the work in drafting the Constitution for their Commonwealth Government has already been done in advance for them. By mandatory legislation, enacted by the United States Congress and accepted by the Philippines Legislature, many of the features of the transition Government, which it is intended shall last for ten years, have already been decided upon. The delegates may argue about the form and degree, but the general substance was decided for them in Washington when the Tydings-McDuffie Act was adopted.

Pending eventual withdrawal of United States sovereignty over the archipelago, the Constitution has to contain certain specific provisions, amongst which may be mentioned an obligation of allegiance to the United States, whose supreme authority must be recognised; exemption of United States and church property from taxation; provisions for religious tolerance; recognition of the provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie Act in trade relations between the Philippines and the United States; maintenance of existing limitations on the contraction of public debt; approval by the President of the United States of acts affecting currency, coinage, imports and exports, and immigration; and the conceding of United States control over foreign affairs. Further obligations worthy of note are that the United States preserves the right to maintain military and other reservations and armed forces in the islands, as well as to call into service all armed forces organised by the Philippines Government. What is more, the United States may intervene for the protection of life or for the maintenance of the Government and its obligations. Two other important restrictions, reflecting unadulterated American doctrines, are the requirement that the Constitution must be Republican in form, and that it must contain a bill of rights. It will thus be seen that although the United States is doing its part in fulfilment of the pledge of eventual independence, every care is being exercised that during the transition period there shall be no lapsing of American control of the situation—a wise and very necessary precaution at a moment when affairs in the Pacific are far from being composed.

NOTES OF THE DAY

MODERN SOCIETY

The fact that modern civilization has two faces, one of which has been modelled with infinitely more attention and skill than the other, comes very close to being the basic point of all the world's present troubles. These two faces are the material realm of science, invention, and technical progress, on the one side, and the social realm of human relations, emotions, and mass thinking, on the other. The former is far advanced; the latter is a constant reminder that we are relatively only a few generations' out of barbarism. If the history of the human race, covering approximately a million years, is translated into the terms of a man's lifetime, how long has the race been civilised? In terms of personal adjustment rather than race adjustment it is as if civilization had begun only 19 days ago, as if cumulative science went back only to midnight, and the habit of deliberate invention only to this morning.

COMPLEX TOOLS

In other words, the world has been out of the wilderness only a very short time, and acquisition of those complex tools by which modern society is maintained dates back only an hour or so. That being the case, it is small wonder that we have not yet discovered how to extract the utmost in human values from the machines which our ingenuity has devised. We have done marvellously well at the job of inventing things, but we have made practically no progress at the job of learning how to use them properly. That is why we have starvation in the midst of plenty; we suffer because we have too much of everything, and not because we have too little. The task to-day is the education of society up to the level of our scientists and our technicians. Until this is done, their achievements will do the world as much harm as good.

TYPE'S PRANK

The typographical error is one of those perverse and impish pranks of fate which afflict all newspapers in all countries alike. Every editor has suffered from it:

the latest is a German editor in Essen, whose paper published a telegram of birthday greetings sent to Hitler by President Hindenburg. The president closed his telegram with an expression not unlike the English "Hear, hear!" And some luckless printer inserted a question mark instead of an exclamation point after it, which so changed the sense of it in German that it became a cynical, "Oh, Yeah?" as a result, the printer went to gaol and the editor suffered vast mental stress. But anyone who has ever worked on the production of the printed word will sympathise with both. The typographical error will happen, no matter how much care is taken; and it has a fiendish way of happening at the worst times and places. It is just one of those things that put gray hairs on the heads of men who work in newspaper offices.

WHEN THE LAW SPEAKS

The language of the law can be a delight to the layman—when it isn't a pain in the neck. In Italy a farmer allowed a pig to stray into the road. A motorist averted to when the pig refused to move, and damaged his car. He sued the farmer for damages, holding the farmer responsible for the pig's acts. The case finally reached the supreme court, which rendered its decision as follows: "When the comportment of an animal, without going into the hypothesis of fault or force majeure, sets in motion elements which otherwise would have remained inert, and these elements in turn, through no fault of their own, but due to the animal's comportment, cause damage to be done, the causal connection between the comportment of the animal, for which the law holds the proprietor to be responsible, and the occurrence causing the damage, appears to be uninterrupted." In other words—the owner of the pig was responsible, and had to pay.

DEATH OF "NEW DIPLOMACY"

By G. A. MARTELLI

ONE OF THE striking aspects of the revival of traditional forms of diplomacy. The fondness shown by post-War statesmen for holding world conferences, exchanging visits, and sending each other open letters, has become increasingly unpopular. The failure of the Disarmament Conference is likely finally to discredit it. It is doubtful if disarmament was ever possible, but the democratic, not to say democratic, methods used in negotiating it have obviously made its chances infinitely smaller.

The death of disarmament would therefore mark the end of an era, the era of the so-called "new diplomacy." After the discomfiture of the amateurs, professionalism is entering into its own again.

That democracy should dislike and distrust diplomacy and try to usurp its functions, as it has been doing for the last fifteen years, is only natural. The one is competent, well-informed, precise, and economical in words; the other, ignorant, vague, garrulous, and incapable. Democracy loves slogans, gestures, appeals to sentiment, formulae (the emptier the better); all of which diplomacy is justly suspicious. Democracy would like to spend its time alternately taking off its hat to its neighbours and challenging them to duels. Diplomacy is equally opposed to either of these attitudes. Democracy loves the magnesium flare, the little talk on the news reel; diplomacy shuns them. Democracy... but why go on? The incompatibility of mass rule (and mass emotion) with a wise foreign policy is sufficiently demonstrated by the history of Europe since the War.

It is the history of an attempt to apply democratic ideals and democratic methods to that essentially undemocratic society, the Comity of Nations. There was about as much chance of this succeeding as would be an attempt to impose, say, modern hygiene on a primitive people, or Mormonism or Prohibition on England. Quite apart from the questionable ideal of an international democracy, the method employed for establishing it could only be fatal. The secret of democracy, as we all know, is the secret of appealing to the greatest number. If this principle is liable to be dangerous in domestic politics, its effects in the international sphere are even more unfortunate. They can be observed at any gathering in Geneva.

To post-War statesmen intoxicated with such phrases as "Self-Determination," "Equality of Rights," "World Co-operation," &c., the League of Nations provided an ideal platform, bigger and better and more resonant than any Parliamentary tribune. Here in front of an audience avid of oratory, and of a host of reporters waiting to flash their eloquence round the earth, the world's leaders could talk to their hearts' content. There has never been such a marvellous debating house—as spectacular, so well-equipped, with such brilliant performers in every language.

The trouble is that in public debate people speak not only to convince but also for effect. They may be thinking, perhaps, of a personal triumph or of the need to flatter or appease some section of public opinion. A delegate at Geneva, knowing his speech is being reported, might be concerned more with the reaction in his own country, even his own constituency, than with that of the other delegates with whom he is ostensibly conducting business. The matter in hand would in that case take second place.

This sort of thing has, in fact, happened again and again, and still more time would have been wasted by it had not the world's representatives tacitly agreed among themselves long ago that all public declarations were intended primarily for internal consumption, and could, therefore, be largely disregarded. But is it to be wondered at that with such a system nothing has ever been done?

The fact of the matter is that delicate diplomatic negotiations (and all important negotiations are delicate) cannot be conducted in the glare of world publicity, when every "give" is liable to be denounced as a national betrayal and every "take" may be exploited by an unscrupulous opposition; when each move is jealously watched by a Press ready to pounce on the least hitch and magnify it into a rupture, or (worse) prematurely acclaim accord where there is none.

The danger of this "box-office draw" diplomacy is that it pits the parties against each other instead of drawing them together. Each negotiation becomes a sporting contest—though sometimes not so sporting—in which the points lost or scored by the Cabinet Ministers put up as champions are minutely recorded by the spectators in their respective countries. Considerations of prestige thus become paramount. It is like trying to settle that matter of the broken fence with your wife and children and servants and the neighbours, and all the other people in the village looking on and cheering. Amicable arrangements are never arrived at in this way.

Fortunately, the most calamitous consequences of the recent international "dog-fights" have been averted by the professional diplomats. While the would-be arbitrators and pacifists and liquidators have strutted across the stage of Europe's watering places, the much-abused experts have been patiently vigilant in the wings, prompting here, advising there, offering now a timely warning, now a tactful correction, they have done their best to parry the effects of amateurism. Theirs really was the ultimate responsibility. For while politicians come and go, and policies change colour with parties, the national interest remains the same, and it is the business of the diplomats and other permanent officials to preserve continuity in its pursuit.

One of the charges brought against the old diplomacy by the new, and by which the latter seeks to justify itself, is that it works in secret and commits nations to policies which they would not approve of were they given the

The Very Idea!
THE COCKROACH
HORROR

By George

"THE GOLDEN CANDAREEN"

(Eleventh Instalment)

JEEJEEBHOY gave a cry of horror!

He had seen a cockroach emerge from the neck of the whisky bottle and the horrible insect was now reeling towards the place where Madge and he were still clasped in each other's arms.

Jeejeebhoy's father had once been bitten by a cockroach and Reg, being the only son, had inherited a loathing for the creatures which amounted almost to a positive dislike.

Drawing up his knee sharply, Jeejeebhoy forced Madge to free him and then hurriedly wrapping his shoes round his feet he vaulted the verandah and disappeared into the blackness of the night.

With a curse, Madge darted to the verandah.

What had happened to mar this meeting to which she had looked forward so much? Why had he given such a dreadful cry? Madge looked in the mirror and found the answer, for the cockroach was now almost within biting distance.

So it was this which had come between her and her boy friend. Madge waited till the little beast climbed on to the table and then flicked it viciously with her finger into the jungle.

With a scream of anger the amah dashed from her cubicle and flung herself at Madge's feet.

Dear readers, this is the last but not instalment of our inspired serial and it is rapidly bringing us to the point where we started off. Now problems are raised to-day, the most vexed question being, why did the amah fling herself at Madge's feet? We admit it seems an unlikely thing to do but perhaps Madge has secreted the amah's copy of Chaucer's early English poems in her boots. Or perhaps she has discovered that Madge has borrowed her boots to make a good showing in front of Jeejeebhoy. Whatever the reason we can rely on Madge keeping her head, though the appendage does not seem to have benefited anyone materially so far in our soul-stabbing serial. In the meantime, what has happened to Jeejeebhoy? Will he meet the cockroach in the silent watches of the forest and if so, will he discover that it is the common blattid orthopteros and not the Chachalaca as he had feared? Whatever fate may decide in this respect we fear that our readers have seen the last of that glamorous character, for tomorrow will find him typing out correspondence at his little desk at the P.W.D. unconscious that the recital of his deeds of prowess have won him the admiration of a host of fans.

LESSON IN JOURNALISM.

The Film Critic

Being a film critic is not such a good job as it was.

In the old days a critic could give a bum show a great write up and save himself a lot of trouble but now, that the public has been educated up to art, they've got temperamental over what they read.

The worst part of a film critic's life is explaining to the other reporters why he has got no spare complimentary tickets. These are the few occasions he gets a free criticism of himself.

The essential feature of being a film critic is being able to sit still and smoke calmly through the most galling scenes long hours at a stretch and then to go back to the sordid surroundings of the office and reduce Mae West to a couple of adjectives, curve Greta Garbo into a cohesive sentence and make Marilyn Dairich appear like a goddess in pants jammed between an advertisement for castor oil and a motoring column.

At Home the film critic's main standby is caviar and cigars but he loses this diet when he comes to the Far East and easily adapts himself to frozen beer, ice cream, and Camel cigarettes.

"No, sir, our grandfathers wouldn't recognize the world we're livin' in to-day."

CONTROL OF RUBBER

NEW SYSTEM IN DUTCH INDIES

NATIVE PROBLEM OVERSTRESSED

The Hague, June 26. It is reliably reported that the Dutch East Indies Government is replacing the export duty on native rubber as soon as possible by a system of individual licences.

Meanwhile, the latest available information shows that the potential capacity of the native production is considerably lower than was previously estimated.

A communiqué issued by the second meeting of the International Rubber Regulation Committee states that the Committee welcomed Sir George Beharrell (Britain) and Herr Otto Friedrich (Germany) as members of the Advisory Panel of Manufacturers.

Matters relating to the organization and the preparation of statistics were considered, and also reports from the various delegations on the measures taken to implement the obligations of their territories under the international agreement.

The Committee is very satisfied with the progress made in the latter direction, which has been very well advanced. The next meeting of the Committee will be held on July 31.—Reuter.

CORRESPONDENCE

Rabies Scare

To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.

Sir.—The only power, so far as I can find, of the Police in the New Territories to deal with rabies is contained in the following regulation, which is interesting in view of your announcement that 200 dogs were shot in the New Territories, presumably by the Police:

"Any dog which appears to be suffering from rabies or mangle, and which does not appear to be at the time under the control of any person, may be captured and detained, or may be shot or otherwise destroyed, by any police officer or any person authorized by the Captain Superintendent of Police."

It seems hardly likely that the 200 dogs shot were rabid dogs and therefore the remainder presumably were mangle. I don't think mangle is a symptom of rabies or of contact with rabies.

The deduction to be drawn from the above facts is that either the police have been shooting without any lawful authority (which ought to be impossible even in Hongkong), or the 200 dogs were rabid, or the shooting in part had no relation to rabies, and the information is therefore misleading.

As including the Public to think the police are taking anti-rabies measure in shooting 200 dogs. It may be the dogs in question were contacts and were destroyed on the orders of the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon, who has the following powers:

"If the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon is of opinion that any dog is or may be suffering from rabies, or that any dog has been or may reasonably be suspected of having been in contact with any case of rabies or suspected rabies, it may be destroyed by him or by any person by his orders."

Might I suggest that the powers that he study the existing regulation? If there is any real danger from rabies and if there is any means of reducing that danger, let Government order that the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon and the Law Officers consult together and devise some means which is lawful, enforceable and holds some prospect of success.

If it is not possible to devise effective measures let the police be called off. I know nothing of preventive medicine but I should say it is a very highly technical subject, requiring skill which the police cannot be expected to possess.

In any case the present regulations are worse than useless as neither the police nor the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon have the powers which are obviously necessary for dealing with an actual outbreak to say nothing of taking effective preventive steps.

My object in writing this letter is to induce Government to take proper steps to control the situation, and to show how the police are placed in an impossible position by trying to deal with a situation which should be in the hands of the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon and both are without proper powers.

order of December 12 last, authorizing the purchase of all newly-mined silver at 64.5 cents an ounce, amounted, up to June 22, to 8,945,000 ounces.

Total purchases for the week ended June 22 on this account were 380,532 ounces.

The purchases are now being made from the general fund of the Treasury rather than from the Stabilization Fund.

The value of silver bullion held on June 22 is given as $45,826,000, equivalent to 100,000,000 ounces at present cost values in the open market. The figure compares with $44,873,000 on June 1.

Gold receipts under the anti-hoarding order have amounted to $28,119,000 in gold coin, and $60,463,000 in gold certificates.—Reuter.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Hawaii may be a Paradise to some people, but to the property department of the Cecil B. DeMille troupe, which went to the Islands to film Paramount's "Four Frightened People," it was a "happy hunting ground" in more ways than one. The picture, with Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Mary Boland, William Gargan and Leo Carrillo playing the leading role, will be shown at the King's Theatre starting on Thursday. The system of laying out or renting when the company did not leave in stock was entirely forgotten. Practically everything that was needed to "prop" the picture was found right at hand, free for the taking, in the various jungle locations they used. As no jungle were they forced to go off for anything that was needed in the filming of the picture. Only a minute's notice was ever needed when any item was found missing at the last minute. All that the property department would have to do was to pick a few feet into the jungle and pick it. As far as the purchasing agent of the troupe was concerned, Hawaii was Heaven. The story of "Four Frightened People" is that of four highly bred ladies and gentlemen, who are lost in the dense jungle and find that they are really men and women after all.

"Female" It is a strange and unique, not to say startling role, that Ruth Chatterton plays in her latest First National picture, "Female," which opens to-morrow at the different role from anything which she has portrayed before, either on the stage or the screen. She lives, in her character role, what might be termed a sort of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde existence, being a big business woman by day, and a flirt, who even stoops to pick up strangers on the street, at night. She is an alert, ruthless, able and magnetic business woman. As the head of a vast motor car industry inherited from her father she is aggressive and capable of mischief with the best of the most capable of industry. To her, business and love are as far apart as the poles. She reserves one for the daytime and the other for the night. The character, as drawn in "Female," is depicted as something of a surprise, and business genius, believes she has the right to override the conventions of society. The character, as played by Miss Chatterton never is made to appear cheap, even though she flirts outrageously with a stranger at a shooting gallery. But she knows her men, or thinks she does, and this happens to be one with such high ideals that he will have none of her. It is this that brings out the really feminine in the character, for woman-like, when she finds she cannot have what she desires, she moves heaven and earth to get it. She eventually gets her man, but it is only after her own ideals and her viewpoint of life have changed. In fact, she completely reverses herself, coming to the belief that marriage and a home is woman's allotment. George Brent, Miss Chatterton's husband, plays the role of the man who changes her attitude toward life. Johnny Mack Brown, Gavin Gordon and Phillip Reed are among her lovers. The picture is lavish in the extreme, as befits the home of a wealthy young society woman of cultivated taste. The business settings comprise scenes at a vast plant in Los Angeles, of which Miss Chatterton is head.

"Ever in My Heart" What has been hailed in Hollywood as Barbara Stanwyck's most emotional picture in which her role is far removed from anything she has ever done before on the screen, will be shown from to-morrow at the Alhambra Theatre when "Ever in My Heart," by Warner Bros., has its premiere. Tender romance and powerful drama are laid first in a quaint New England village then sweeps to the American sector in France after America entered the world war. Barbara Stanwyck plays the role of a sweet New England girl married before the war to a German professor of chemistry, who returns to his native land and joins their army, before we entered the conflict. "Ever in My Heart," is said to carry the most powerful climax ever shown on the screen when the loving wife, as a canteen worker in France comes face to face with her husband as a German spy. Barbara Stanwyck's work in this picture is said to be so outstanding, so real, so touching, that it immediately won the admiration of Warner Bros., resigned her to a long term contract. Her leading man, Otto Kruger, while comparatively new to the screen, has long been famous on the Broadway stage. He is the Edward G. Robinson, Paul Lang type of finished actor who is able to get the very most out of every role he plays. As the German professor husband and social ostracism by her friends and relatives after the war started, he is said to give a most touching performance. Other celebrities in the cast include Ralph Bellamy and Ruth Donnelly. Archie Mayo directed.

All the elements that made Maurice Ravel's "Bolero" one of the most exciting and popular of modern musical compositions have been captured by the motion picture camera and translated into the language of the screen. It is in Paramount's dramatic romance, "Bolero," now playing at the King's Theatre, with George Raft, Carol Lombard, Sally Rand, the famous fan dancer, Frances Drake, Gertrude Michael and William Frawley, the film interpretation carries the same excitement and emotional appeal so evident in the music. and contemporary actresses were skilled in the technique of the theatre. This is the compliment paid to the exquisite Norma by no less a personage than Mrs. Patrick Campbell, distinguished British actress whose triumphs in the past decade have made her a traditional figure of the stage. Mrs. Campbell, who makes her film debut with Miss Shearer in "Bolero," her glamorous new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle which has its final showing to-day at the Queen's Theatre, is best remembered for her success in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," in which she created the title role, and in George Bernard Shaw dramas. "To my way of thinking," she said, "Miss Shearer is as great a mistress of the screen art as the others were of the theatre. And make no mistake about it, the screen is a very difficult taskmaster. A smooth performance is very difficult on the screen. Great dependability is placed in the mechanical phases, the eventual cutting of the film into final sequences. Miss Shearer is absolute in her technical art. She has mastered it just as Sarah Bernhardt, Eleonora Duse, Ellen Terry and all the other great stage actresses knew all the little secrets of stagecraft. She knows her job thoroughly. No detail is too insignificant to claim her painstaking attention." Edmund Goulding wrote and directed the new Shearer film in which Mrs. Campbell plays the part of Aunt Hetty, eccentric British dowager, Robert Montgomery and Herbert Marshall share leading man honours and the cast includes Skeets Gallagher, Ralph Forbes, Lilian Tashman, Arthur Jarrett, Earl Oxford, Helen Jerome Eddy, George K. Arthur, Baby Marilyn Spinnert, Phyllis Cochran Howard, Chaldecott and Halliwell Hobbes.

JAPANESE PLAYERS WIPED OUT AT WIMBLEDON

SUSSEX ESTABLISH A FIRM COUNTY CRICKET LEADERSHIP THE ROUTING OF YORKSHIRE JAS. JANGRIDGE JUST MISSES DISTINCTION

London, June 26. The really important county cricket match during the last three days was that between Yorkshire and Sussex at Sheffield. But the numerous calls made by the Test match on the Yorkshire strength hardly allowed a fair trial of ability between the teams, and Sussex, taking advantage of the position, won by an innings.

The effect was to leave Sussex high and dry leaders of the championship table, while Kent, as a result of their win over Lancashire, renew their challenge to Yorkshire for second place. Yorkshire, batting, went to pieces against the three Sussex stock bowlers, James Langridge, probably the most complete all-rounder to have Test honours, and John Parks and Bert Wensley.

Langridge was very unlucky in Yorkshire's second innings, just failing to achieve the distinction of taking all ten wickets in an innings. His nine victims cost but 34 runs. This was good enough to send Yorkshire back for 115 after they had previously been dismissed by Wensley (5 for 46) and Parks (4 for 37) for 126. Sussex were able to declare their one and only innings at 357 for 5 wickets.

SMART ESSEX WIN.

Essex accomplished a smart performance in beating Hampshire by nine wickets. There were only four runs between the teams at the close of the first innings, Hampshire scoring 305 to 301 by Essex.

The Essex innings was featured by a century by Cutmore and some great bowling by Kennedy, who sent back seven batsmen for 73 runs.

Hampshire fared ill in their second attempt, being all out for 148, and Essex, making light of their task, hit off the 154 runs for the loss of a single wicket.

The clock played an important part in the result of the Derbyshire v Northants match. Northants made a big effort to force an outright decision, but when stumps were drawn they were still 56 runs behind with seven wickets down.

Rain affected both the Notts and Worcester and Middlesex and Gloucester matches. Notts were robbed of victory, and Middlesex had to remain content to take four points, there being no decision on the first innings.

UNSUCCESSFUL DECLARATION.

One of the most interesting games in the first class programme, although it was not a county championship engagement, was that between Surrey and Oxford, which ended in a five wickets win for Surrey after the University had declared in their second innings.

To Oxford's first knock of 305, Surrey responded with 483. The University batted a second time for 280 for 7 and then declared—a very bold move.

Surrey, however, were equal to the occasion, and hit off the 103 runs for victory with ease.

The detailed scores which will be found in these columns were cabled by Reuters.

COTTON SETS NEW GOLF RECORD

AMAZING 66 IN BRITISH OPEN.

OLD OXFORD BLUE DOES WELL

London, June 26. The qualifying rounds of the British Open Golf Championship were commenced to-day over the Royal Cinquo Ports Course at Deal and the Royal St. George's at Sandwich. There are 292 starters but there are some notable absentees, including Cyril Tolley, John Deforest, Vardon and others.

The day was warm, sunny and windless and conditions generally were ideal.

Henry Cotton, entered from Brussels, always full of surprises, broke the course record at St. George's by two strokes, having a card of 66. His score was a remarkable one, with eleven birdies and one eagle, going out in 31 and coming in in 35.

Martin, the former Oxford Blue, broke the amateur record at Deal with a card of 70.

The American title-holder, Shute, was playing listlessly to-day and not convincingly, but he, like Cotton, generally can be counted on to surprise the competition. He had a 76 at St. George's. Gene Sarazen and MacDonald Smith had 75 at Deal.

Joe Kirkwood had 76 at St. George's. Other prominent players, such as Aubrey Boomer of France, Delatorre, of Spain, and Denny Gadd had 71; Nolan, Ernest Whitcombe, Reginald Whitcombe and August Boyer of France had 73 each; Padghern and Charles Whitcombe were 74 and McLean, Compton and Munn, disappointingly, scored 76's.—Reuters.

Reflections On Second Test

Importance Of The Follow-On: Where England Were Rather Lucky

(By R. Abbit)

I imagine that yesterday morning, when there arose a gasp of surprise. As we were about the weather at Lord's over the week-end, to see in our newspaper was a definite result of it was, and we are now absolutely square all round. We have on each side luck has broken even in this Australia won the toss and beat us, though not so badly as we beat them. bat on a badly worn wicket, it was, so far as one beast as they had on Monday last.

It would be absurd to read too much into our victory. We are, of course, delighted at it, and we are full of praise and admiration for the men who brought it off, especially Verity. But consider the facts. We had done very nicely on Friday, and our total of 440 was quite satisfactory. But Australia did just as well—192 for two.

And then, it seems, "the rains descended and the floods came, and, after a dull early morning, a hot sun came out! To your tents, O Australia!

The wicket turned to a glue-pot, and we had the very man for the situation in Hedley Verity. More power to him. But for goodness sake do not let us get puffed up and cherty about it. I am convinced that, had the positions been reversed, Grimmett and O'Reilly would have shot us out just as easily. So it is all square.

THE KEY POSITION.

To my mind, the whole crux of the situation was the question of the follow-on. In a three (or more) day match a side has to lead by 150 runs to be able to enforce the follow-on. Now, what would have been Wyatt's position if the Australians had saved the follow-on? He would have been less than 150 runs on, with a glue-pot to bat on, and the knowledge that his men might well be out by the close of play for some hundred runs and so leave the Australians with less than three hundred to get on a wicket that might well roll out slow and easy on the Tuesday!

And it was touch and go. At one period Australia, with only eight wickets down, only wanted six runs everyone turned to the cricket not in possession of the facts the last thing we expected the test match! But there round. We have on each side luck has broken even in this Australia won the toss and beat us, though not so badly as we beat them. bat on a badly worn wicket, it was, so far as one beast as they had on Monday last.

to do it. And Chipperfield was not out 37. But this was just after the luncheon interval, and he had not got set again. At 284 the last two wickets fell, and, in my opinion, the match was lost with them.

THE HOUR AND THE MAN.

The hero of the occasion is Hedley Verity of Yorkshire. He took 16 wickets for 104 runs, a feat which I believe to be without precedent in the history of test cricket with Australia. No-one in test cricket has taken more than seventeen wickets in a match (I speak subject to correction), and this has only been done eleven times in first-class county cricket.

Besides these cases, S. F. Barnes took 17 for 150 against S. Africa in the year before the war. I ought to mention that these figures do not include the 1933 season. Verity was older than many of the cricketers have been, when he sprang into prominence. Born in 1905, it is not until 1930 that he appears in the bowling analyses in Wisden. I tabulate his figures since in round numbers, disregarding four ranking purposes those bowlers who only took a handful of wickets.

Are they not amazingly consistent?

THE REST OF THE TEAM.

I must admit that in an article I published, recently, I seem to have Hendren did not come off, but he took a couple of catches, and he can hardly be dropped any more than Sutcliffe, who also took two catches. Frankly, if any change be made, I think Garry will go, as since his initial score he has done little with the bat, while he took no wicket for fifty-six in the first knock at Lord's and was not bowled in second.

As I say, I doubt if there will be any change at Manchester, but, if there is, I hope that Nicholls will come in for Garry.

FUJIKURA, NISHIMURA AND MIKI ALL DEFEATED YAMAGISHI ONLY SURVIVOR

NIGEL SHARPE, GIANT KILLER, CAUSES ANOTHER UPSET

Yesterday was Japan's black day at Wimbledon. Only Yamagishi remains to keep the flag flying. Nishimura, Fujikura and Miki all figured in surprising defeats. Their fates were settled by a Czechoslovakian, Englishman and Australian respectively.

Nigel Sharpe, the man who has appeared in more sensational victories at Wimbledon than any other player of his calibre, was again to the fore with a great victory at the expense of Fujikura.

Sharpe, who does not figure in the first twelve English ranking players, overcame Japan's third ranking singles player five sets.

London, June 26. One of the most dramatic matches at Wimbledon to-day was the second round meeting of Josef Siba, the Czechoslovakian Davis Cup player, and Nishimura, Japan's leading singles exponent. The Japanese lost after having a comparatively easy victory in his grasp.

Nishimura was set point at 5-4 in the first set. In the third set it rained and the ball kept low which disconcerted Nishimura.

The sun came out in the fourth stanza, enabling the Japanese to rush the net, and he took the set quite comfortably.

The fifth set was a test of endurance after Nishimura had led 4-1. To general surprise he allowed Siba to draw up and lead 5-4, after which the Japanese tired rapidly, but held out until the sixteenth game, when the Czech went to his points and a sensational victory.

SHARPE DOES IT AGAIN.

Nigel Sharpe, a previous giant-killer at Wimbledon, with wins over Cochet, de Morpurgo and others, struck his top form to beat Fujikura in five sets.

Sharpe was completely in the ascendant from the baseline, but occasionally went to the net with success.

Fujikura preferred to play the Englishman from the rear of the court, and both players exchanged some brilliant drives. Some of Sharpe's recoveries were highly spectacular.

Rain stopped the game half way through, and when it was resumed, Fujikura could not keep to his feet, and slipping all over the court, lost his touch.

FRENCHMAN CHASED.

When Yamagishi, the Japanese Davis Cup player took the court against Le Sueur the Frenchman the sky was overcast and there was a fairly high wind, threatening rain. Only 6,000 people were present at the All England Tennis Club to watch the day's play.

RESULTS IN BRIEF.

MEN'S SINGLES.

Second Round

D. B. Turnbull (Australia) beat R. Miki (Japan) 6-3, 6-1, 6-1.
J. Siba (Czechoslovakia) beat N. Nishimura (Japan) 8-6, 4-6, 3-6, 2-6, 9-7.
J. Yamagishi (Japan) beat Le Sueur (France) 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.
Nigel Sharpe (Britain) beat J. Fujikura (Japan) 6-4, 3-6, 1-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Yamagishi enjoyed an easy win over the French left-hander. The Japanese indulged in a perfect display of fine driving to the sidelines, at the same time covering every inch of the net in a spectacular manner. He chased the Frenchman all over the court, and was always the master.

MIKI LOSES FORM.

R. Miki, not the least of the Japanese "hopes," disappointed his friends with a display against Don Turnbull, the Australian, much below form.

Miki found great difficulty in returning Turnbull's cannon-ball services generally, slyly them out of court. He was also uneven in his ground strokes, continually finding the net. Miki's only bright moments were at the net, where he often pulled out some delightful winning shots.—Reuters.

Warning To Reckless Jockeys

SEQUEL TO MANY ACCIDENTS

Following the chapter of accidents which took place in the Chester Cup, in which three horses fell, one of them, Lord Carnarvon's Sibell, being later destroyed, un-official complaints have reached the Stewards of the Jockey Club concerning rough and reckless riding.

At a meeting of the Club held at Newmarket Mr. G. D. Smith, the Senior Steward, said the Stewards hoped that all members, when acting as local Stewards, would deal severely with any such cases which were brought before them. He said that the Stewards proposed to repeat, in "The Racing Calendar," the notice to jockeys which was published in 1923, and which would warn jockeys that such behaviour would not be tolerated.

THE WARNING.

This notice reads:—"The Stewards of the Jockey Club warn all jockeys that reckless, careless and erratic riding will not be tolerated. They have requested Stewards of all meetings to report to the Registry Office all such cases, and any jockey so reported will be liable at once to have his licence withdrawn under Rule 17, or to be suspended by the Stewards of the Jockey Club for such period as they may decide."

After the mishap at Chester, which doubtless provoked the Jockey Club to draw attention to the rules regarding rough riding, an inquiry into the affair was held, but there was insufficient evidence to decide on whom the blame should be placed, and no further steps therefore could be taken. Even so, the accident was one which never should have occurred and it is hoped that the warning of the Stewards will have the desired effect in stamping out a tendency which is only in the worst interests of racing.

LAWN BOWLS DELAY

Rain Causes Games To Be Postponed

Yesterday's rain caused a slight delay in the local lawn bowls championship matches, when it was necessary to postpone the games which were down for decision.

Owing to the departure from the Colony of W. Glendinning, the Pairs match between the Kowloon B.G.C. pair, V. Petherick and J. Watson, and the Police couple, A. E. Carey and W. Glendinning, which was fixed for this afternoon, has been cancelled, the latter giving their opponents a walk over.

The match between C. J. Tocchi and G. Perkins in the Singles Championship, for Monday next, has been postponed until Wednesday, Monday being a holiday. Likewise the game between J. Hodgkin and R. Nam has been postponed, although no date for this game has yet been fixed.

ANOTHER TENNIS CLUB FOR SHANGHAI

AMBITIOUS OBJECTS IN VIEW

KHOO HOOI-HYE TAKES OVER SECRETARSHIP

RAOUL CARNAVARO APPOINTED AS INSTRUCTOR

As further evidence of the increasing popularity of tennis in Shanghai, and in response to a demand for more and better playing facilities, still another club has been newly organized, known as the Shanghai Tennis Club, this following hard upon the inauguration of the Cathay Tennis Club. The newest club takes over the tennis grounds formerly occupied by the Chinese National Amateur Athletic Federation, at the Pioneer Field, located at the corner of Rue Chapais and Rue Conty.

The Shanghai Tennis Club has been formed by a group of enthusiasts whose object is purely the promotion of sport and sportsmanship, and it is their hope to promote international goodwill through this medium. For that reason, the membership has been made open to both Chinese and Foreigners. Aiming at the encouragement of healthy competition, the club will work in close co-operation with the National Amateur Athletic Federation, the Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association, and other tennis clubs, so that Shanghai may see over better tennis.

AN AMBITIOUS PROGRAMME.

In order to stimulate interest in the game, the club will hold inter-club, inter-collegiate, inter-hong matches, invitation tournaments, and other competitions. It will also invite leading players from other parts of the world to play exhibition matches here. By way of improving the grounds, the club is arranging to lay out six more courts, in addition to the ten now available of which four are hard courts and six grass. A pavilion combining comfort with utility also will shortly be built on the grounds, equipped with baths, other necessities for the convenience of members and guests.

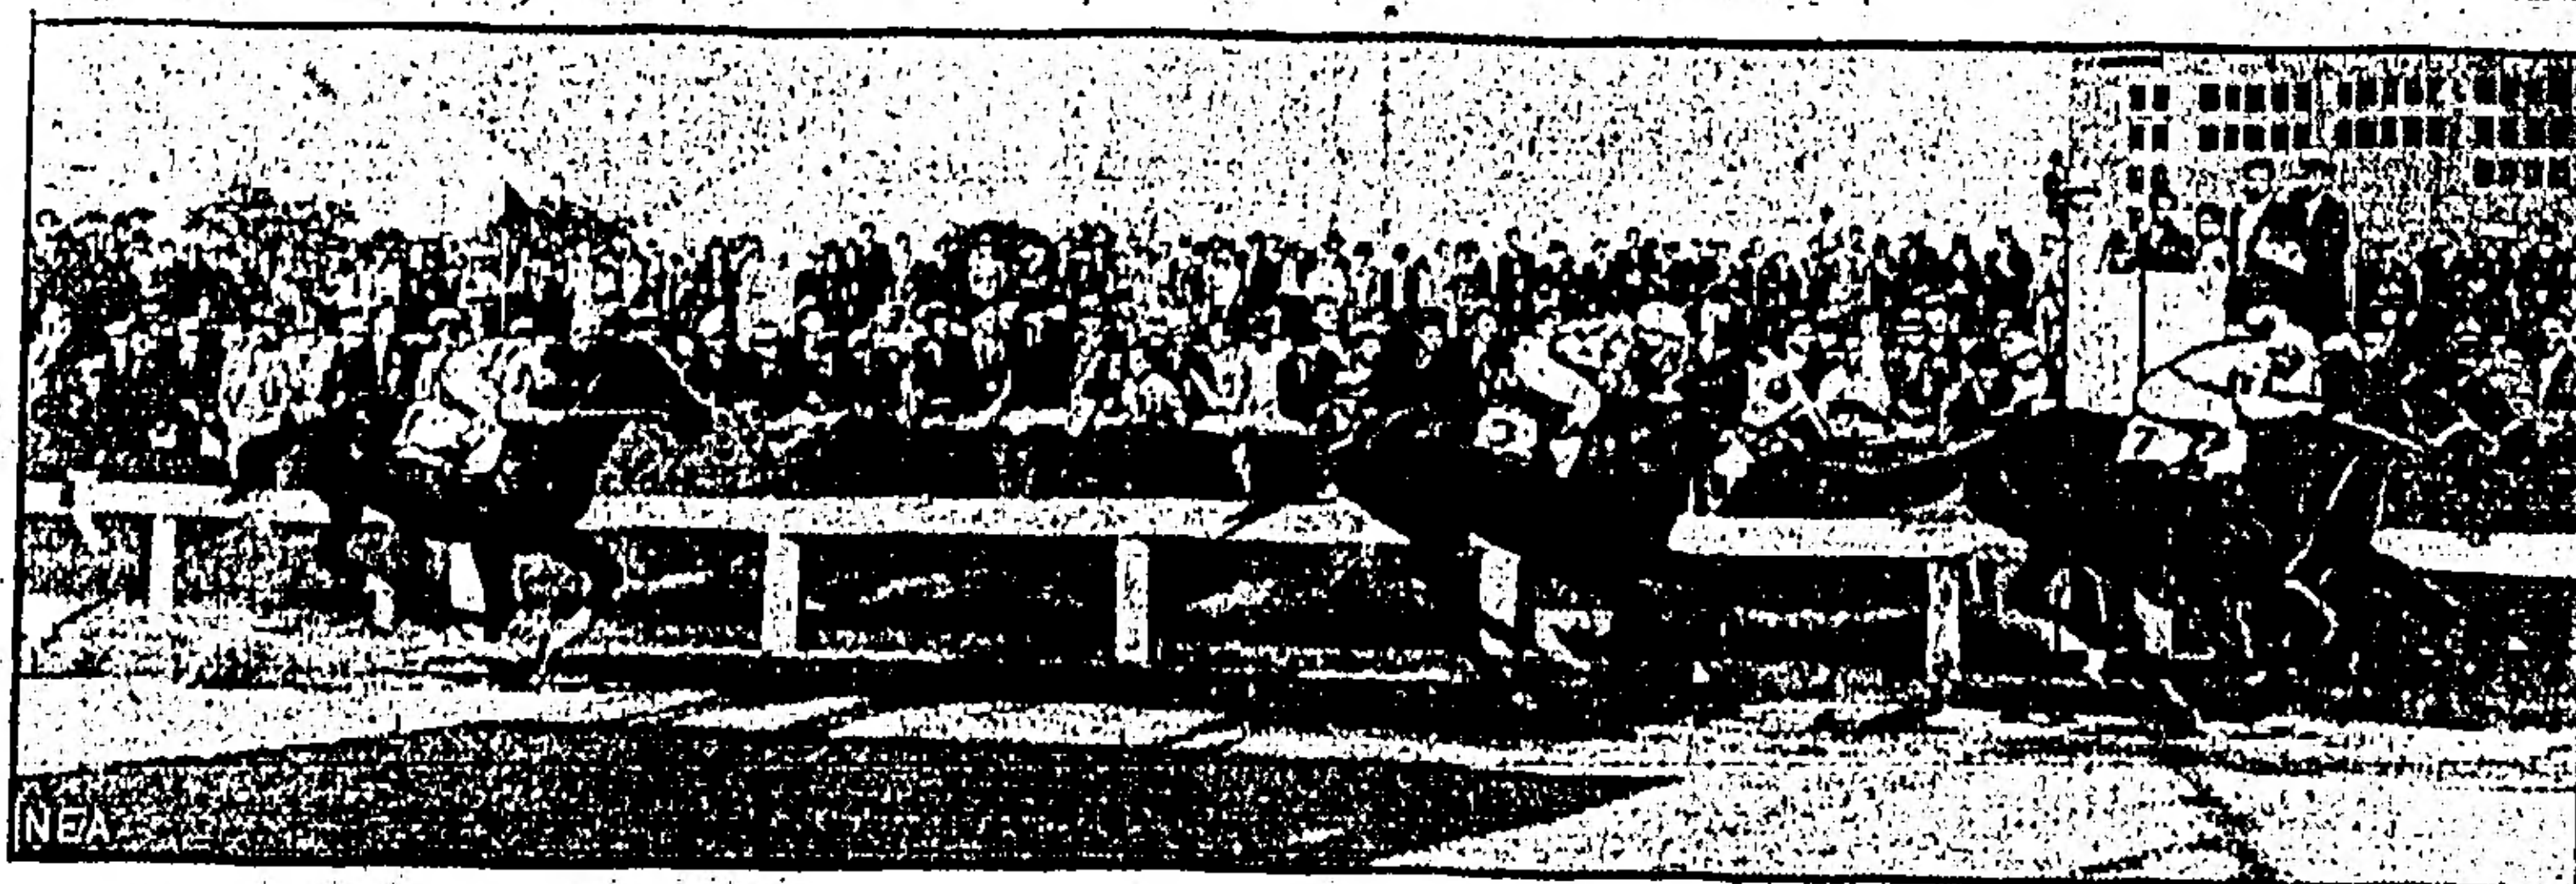

It is not the intention to make the club an exclusive organization, but merely to promote interest in game by providing high-class lockers, modern sanitation, and facilities. The membership is literally open to all and the fees are reasonable, while the courts will be available all day and all through the year.

WELL-KNOWN OFFICIALS.

To ensure that adequate conditions are provided, the club has invited the popular local tennis champion, Mr. Khoo Hooi-hye, to be its executive secretary, while, in the interest of beginners, arrangements are being made to secure the professional assistance of Mr. E. Carnavaro as instructor. Prominent local leaders, including Dr. H. H. Kung, Mr. T. V. Soong, Mayor Wu Te-chen, and Dr. C. T. Wang, have been asked to be patrons of the Club while all the ranking Chinese and foreign players, as well as others keenly interested in tennis, have been invited to become honorary members.

INTERPORT TRIALS.

The following players have been invited to participate in interport tennis trials to be held on the S.L.T.A. court at the Cercle Sportif Français: W. A. H. Duff, Khoo Hooi-hye, Machida, L. D. Carson, M. Benavitch, V. T. Wang, Guy Cheng, and T. K. (Billy) Yu.

A finish over which 30,000 turf fans cheered themselves hoarse is recorded here as Mrs. Dodge Sloan's High Quest barely nosed out Cavalcade, the Kentucky Derby winner, to win the historic Preakness at Baltimore, Md. Running strong in third place is Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Discovery. In fourth place comes Agassian.

SOVIET'S NEW-FOUND LOVE OF GAMES

Cricket, Rugby, Rowing All Encouraged

London, June 20. Cricket is to be introduced into Soviet Russia this year. Hitherto the game has been played only by Englishmen and a few of their Russian friends. Other British sports that are being encouraged include Rugby football, which was introduced for the first time last year. Several teams are now playing the game. Rugby is preferred to American football, which is considered too rough and does not appeal to the Soviet youth.

Water-polo and rowing are very popular and each city has its clubs as many women as men taking part in the rowing events. American baseball is also played.

NEW DEVELOPMENT.

It is significant of the interest taken in games that a miniature city devoted entirely to sport is being built on the outskirts of Moscow. When finished, it will consist of a stadium containing a football field, a running track, tennis courts, a swimming pool, gymnasium, library, restaurants and buildings to house the athletes.

F.A.'S £1,363 CUP-TIES PROFITS

SEMI-FINALS COST £14 14s.

£149,535 ASSETS

The Football Association this year spent £14 14s on running the two semi-final Cup-ties.

The matches brought in £1,371. The balance-sheet of the association reveals these profits, and shows that the association finished the last year of its working with accumulated assets of £149,535.

Amateur Cup-ties added £81 to the income. The final, played on the West Ham United ground, produced £533—and all the F. A. had to meet on the expenditure side of the Amateur Cup was £18 18s. The association's share of the £20,000 gate at the F. A. Cup Final between Manchester City and Portsmouth was £5,081, but the amount spent is not disclosed.

£7,831 FROM CUP ROUNDS.

From all the Cup rounds £7,831 was received. International matches brought in £20,790—the game between England and Scotland at Wembley accounting for £13,384.

Of the nominal capital of 2,000 is. shares 501 have been issued, but the balance-sheet shows that nothing has been paid up on those shares.

Administration cost £15,960, with expenses attached to the running of the council accounting for the greatest sum—£3,521. Salaries, wages and auditors' fees amounted to £2,754.

On the international match account, the game at Wembley cost the F. A. £524—less than half the total amount spent on the tour in Italy and Switzerland.

Even that, though it cost £1,210, resulted in a net gain of £3,716.

Among the assets the value of the offices at Lancaster-gate, W., is written down from £15,472 to £14,698 and, after an allowance of £1,084 for office furniture, the great bulk of the remaining balance is invested in Government securities or loans to clubs. The latter item accounts for £14,662.

The F. A. believes in having cash in big sums at call. The current account at the bank is £14,926.

HOW SARAZEN OVERCOMES SAND BUNKER

ONCE TERRIFYING

NOW HIS PET SHOT

New York, June 19. When he's "hot," there isn't a club in the bag that Gene Sarazen doesn't take out confidently and play with accurate results.

The national professional champion long has been noted among fellow craftsmen as one of the finest long iron players in the game. Never a consistently great putter Gene helped avoid too many headaches on the greens by the artfulness with which he executed mashie niblick shots from the 50-to-100-yard range. His wood shots also are an outstanding feature of his game.

His pet shot, however, is a semi-explosion from a sand trap. Long before the flat-faced "sand wedge" was commercially perfected, under specifications approved by the United States Golf association, Sarazen replaced the outlawed concave-faced niblick with a heavy bladed, straight-faced club of his own manufacture.

He worked on it for hours in the shop, meanwhile experimenting daily in the sand, and finally produced a weapon that gave consistently remarkable results. He developed astounding accuracy to a point where spectators generally hesitated to wager even money that Gene would not get the ball close enough to the hole, from any designed bunker, to get down with a single putt.

"Trap shots that used to give me a fit became easy and I attribute a number of my tournament victories to the fact I frequently was able to recover from the sand without losing a stroke," says Sarazen. "It is true that failure to get out of two bunkers cost me the 1933 British open title but that was no fault of the club or my ability to use it. I simply happened to get unplayable lies twice."

"But the year before I came out of a bunker on the home hole at Fresh Meadow with only a short putt which I got down to clinch the open championship of the United States."

"The extra weight in the sand wedge helps to give better control. I play the shot off the right foot, shorten the swing and hit slightly behind the ball. I do not attempt to dig into the sand heavily, for the reason that a full explosion shot is more difficult to gauge and control. On most shots out of a bunker, I am not merely attempting to get the ball out, but as close to the pin as possible."

BLIND GOLFERS IN A MATCH

CHAUFFEUR AS GUIDE

Two men who were blinded during the war are to play in a golf match—Mr. W. H. J. Oxenham and Captain Gerald Lowry, both of whom practise as osteopaths in the West End of London. They were fellow-students at the College of Osteopathy some years ago.

Mr. Oxenham, who plays golf regularly at West Hove, has a handicap of 22.

The match, according to present arrangements, will be a foursome, each of the sightless men having a professional as partner.

Mr. Oxenham told a reporter: "My partner will, I expect, be MacDonald Smith, and Capt. Lowry will have a well-known London professional."

"My chauffeur, who used to act as my caddy, teed-up for me, gave me the direction of the hole, and handed me the correct club. He left my service recently, but his successor is coming along very nicely."

ly, for the reason that a full explosion shot is more difficult to gauge and control. On most shots out of a bunker, I am not merely attempting to get the ball out, but as close to the pin as possible. "All this, of course, refers to the play-out of traps bordering the green. If I am bunkered elsewhere, the position of the ball and the extent of the hazard to clear determine the club I decide to use."

"If it's a low trap, with room for clearance, I do not hesitate to use a long iron or, on occasions, even a spoon. If the risk is great, however, it is always the better part of valour to play primarily to get out of the trap."

Men who called her a pest... now fought for her favors!

Yesterday a prim, shy teacher! Today an untamed beauty, free and graceful as the animal whose skins she wore! Transformed overnight by the jungle that made ladies and gentlemen male and female!

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

Too many people rely on a finesse to make their hand for them. Take for example to-day's hand—many players will look at it and say, "Well, if the spade finesse works, I can make six odd."

But suppose the spade finesse does not work? Don't wait until the hand is over to say that. As soon as the dummy goes down, it is best for you to go still further and say, "If it falls, can I still make my contract?"

To-day's hand is not a difficult play, but one in which all you have to do is to eliminate two suits from your hand and dummy's so that, when your finesse does fail, your opponent will have to help you with the hand.

The Bidding

East's overall of three diamonds is rather dangerous. When South bids three hearts, he informs his partner that he cannot take care of the losing diamonds.

It looks to South, when his partner goes to four hearts, that

♠ 9 8 6 4 3	♥ 10 7 2	♦ A 2	♣ Q 3
♠ K J 7 2	♥ 9 6	♦ 8 6	♣ J 10 9 6
♠ N	♥ E	♦ S	♣ W
♠ 10	♥ 8 4	♦ K Q J 10	♣ 7 4
♠ 8 7 5 4	♥ 7 4	♦ 5 3	♣ A K 2
Duplicate—N. and S. vul. Opening lead—♦ 9.
South	West	North	East
1♥	Pass	2♥	3♦
3♥	Pass	4♥	Pass
5♥	Pass	6♥	Pass

North must have control of the diamond suit, and if this is true, there is a chance for a slam.

So South makes the slam try with a bid of five hearts. North, holding the ace of diamonds and the queen of clubs, is justified in going to six, as he holds the ace of his partner's suit.

The Play

West's opening lead was the nine of diamonds—the top of his partner's suit—which the declarer won in dummy with the ace. South immediately led two rounds of hearts, which picked up the outstanding trump. Now a small club was won in dummy with the queen, a club returned and won with the king.

The losing diamond then was discarded from dummy on the ace of clubs. South led the five of diamonds and trumped in dummy with the ten of hearts.

The nine of spades was led,

Today's Contract Problem

Did the following hand, South arrive at a part score in clubs. West opens a heart. Declarer to make four clubs.

♠ 10 8 5 2	♥ 10	♦ K 9 4	♣ A Q 10 4
♠ K 7 2	♥ 9 6	♦ 8 6	♣ J 7 4
♠ 9 6 3	♥ 8 5	♦ 5 3	♣ J
♠ N	♥ E	♦ S	♣ W
♠ A Q 7	♥ 8 6	♦ A 9 6 2	♣ K Q 7 4

Solution in next issue.

East played the ten, and declarer covered with the queen. West won the trick with the king and was helpless.

If he returned the jack of spades, the declarer would win with the ace and the eight spot in dummy would be good, while if a diamond or club was returned, the declarer would trump in dummy and discard a losing spade from his own hand.

MARRIED FLIRTS

pression on his face again. "Fraid I didn't hear what you said, darling."

But all this did not dish her spirits as once it would have done. She would put his shoulder gently. Poor Tommy, he was all tired out these nights from that hard old job!

One night he slapped the newspaper down beside her. It was folded neatly back to a pencilled item.

"What on earth?" Gypsy picked it up, stared at it.

She paled a trifle. Almost it was like a bad omen. "Lila's got her divorce!"

"Yep," Tom rubbed his forehead reflectively. "I wonder it lasted that long. He was a good guy, too."

"Oh, marvelous," Gypsy assented absently.

"What happened?"

"I don't know," she flushed over the words. "I don't know."

"Well, I think it's a rotten deal for Bliss anyway," Tom offered bluntly. "He deserved a better break."

"We were married the same day," Gypsy reflected. "Oh, Tommy, wouldn't it be dreadful if anything like that happened to us?"

"It would! His voice sounded grim."

She shivered and his arm tightened around her.

"Don't be silly."

She blinked and laughed, wiping suddenly flamed eyes. "I don't know—something goes wrong and first thing you know people talk divorce."

"Who does?"

"Well," she told him slowly, "I've been so mad at you, once or twice, I've been on the verge of suggesting it myself."

"No, but seriously," Gypsy said, luxuriating in her own sense of security. "What could a man or woman do if the other person in the case came to him and said 'Look, I want to be free!'"

Tom shrugged. "I don't know. Let him go, I guess."

She protested. "Ah, but that's not right. I suppose I'd do it, though. I suppose anyone would. Pride would make you, no matter how you felt."

"Let's stop talking nonsense," Tom advised with a yawn.

Gypsy thought of the conversation later that night. Such things did happen, and to people they knew, too. So far she and Tom had been lucky to keep their marriage safe. Pray God their luck would hold!

ALERT CHAUFFEUR

THWARTS A DARING ROBBERY

How a chauffeur's prompt action resulted in the arrest of an alleged robber was emphasised at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, when a man named Lo Hoi-tong was charged before Mr. Macfadyen with committing an armed robbery, with another man not in custody, on No. 8 Wood Road on June 2, and with being in possession of a loaded revolver and five extra rounds of ammunition without a permit from the Hon. I. G. P.

Another man, Wong Ching, alleged to be a member of the gang but not connected with the robbery, was also charged with possession of a loaded revolver and five extra rounds of ammunition.

For the prosecution, Detective Inspector M. Murphy stated that the complainant, Lai Hin-man, was the proprietor of the Kowloon Hotel and the Tung Wah Land Investment Company, and resided at No. 8 Wood Road, Wanchai, with his family. He was sitting in the drawing room on the ground floor at 2.10 p.m. on Saturday, June 2, when it was alleged, Lo Hoi-tong and another man walked in. The complainant had known Lo Hoi-tong for years, and the two men sat down beside him. After a few minutes, complainant got up with the intention of leaving the room, but it was further alleged, the two men produced revolvers and forced him to sit down again.

$10,000 Demanded.

The complainant, went on Inspector Murphy, would testify that the two men demanded a sum of $10,000. He told them that he did not have that amount of money, and a heated argument ensued. Two members of the family, complainant's wife and daughter, heard the commotion and came downstairs and they would say that they saw the two men brandishing their revolvers at him. Further threats were made by the two men and the complainant was finally induced to produce a wallet from which he extracted $500. This did not prove sufficient for the two men, who then attempted to take the wallet from the complainant by force. In the struggle, the two men succeeded in taking another $500 from the wallet.

Meanwhile, the complainant's chauffeur had noticed what was happening. During the argument, he slipped out of the house and, using a neighbour's telephone, rang up the Police.

Inspector Murphy and a party of detectives rushed to the scene and actually found Lo Hoi-tong in the house with a loaded revolver in his possession. The other man had made his escape from the roof.

The Police found that Lo Hoi-tong had only $300 in his possession, and it is presumed that the other man had the remainder of the $1,000.

Another Man Arrested.

Acting on information received as the result of enquiries, the Police arrested Wong Ching in Nathan Road later on the same day. He had a revolver which was not licensed, but there was no evidence to show that he was connected with the robbery.

When charged, Lo Hoi-tong said he was poor and had gone to see the complainant, from whom he wanted a loan of $300.

Giving evidence, Lai Hin-man said that when Lo Hoi-tong entered his drawing room, he did not recognise him, but later recalled that Lo had been his apprentice when he was a boy, some 20 years ago. He did not know the other man, who gave his name as Wong Yu, alias Wong Mun.

Lai Hin-man then described the events, his evidence following the outline by Inspector Murphy. The case was remanded until this afternoon.

DARING ROBBERY

COLONIAL TREASURER VICTIMISED

The Hon. Mr. Edwin Taylor, the Colonial Treasurer, was the victim of a daring daylight robbery on Sunday, when jewellery and two watches, valued at approximately $300 was stolen.

NATIVE RUBBER.

DUTCH INDIES PLAN LICENCE TAXATION

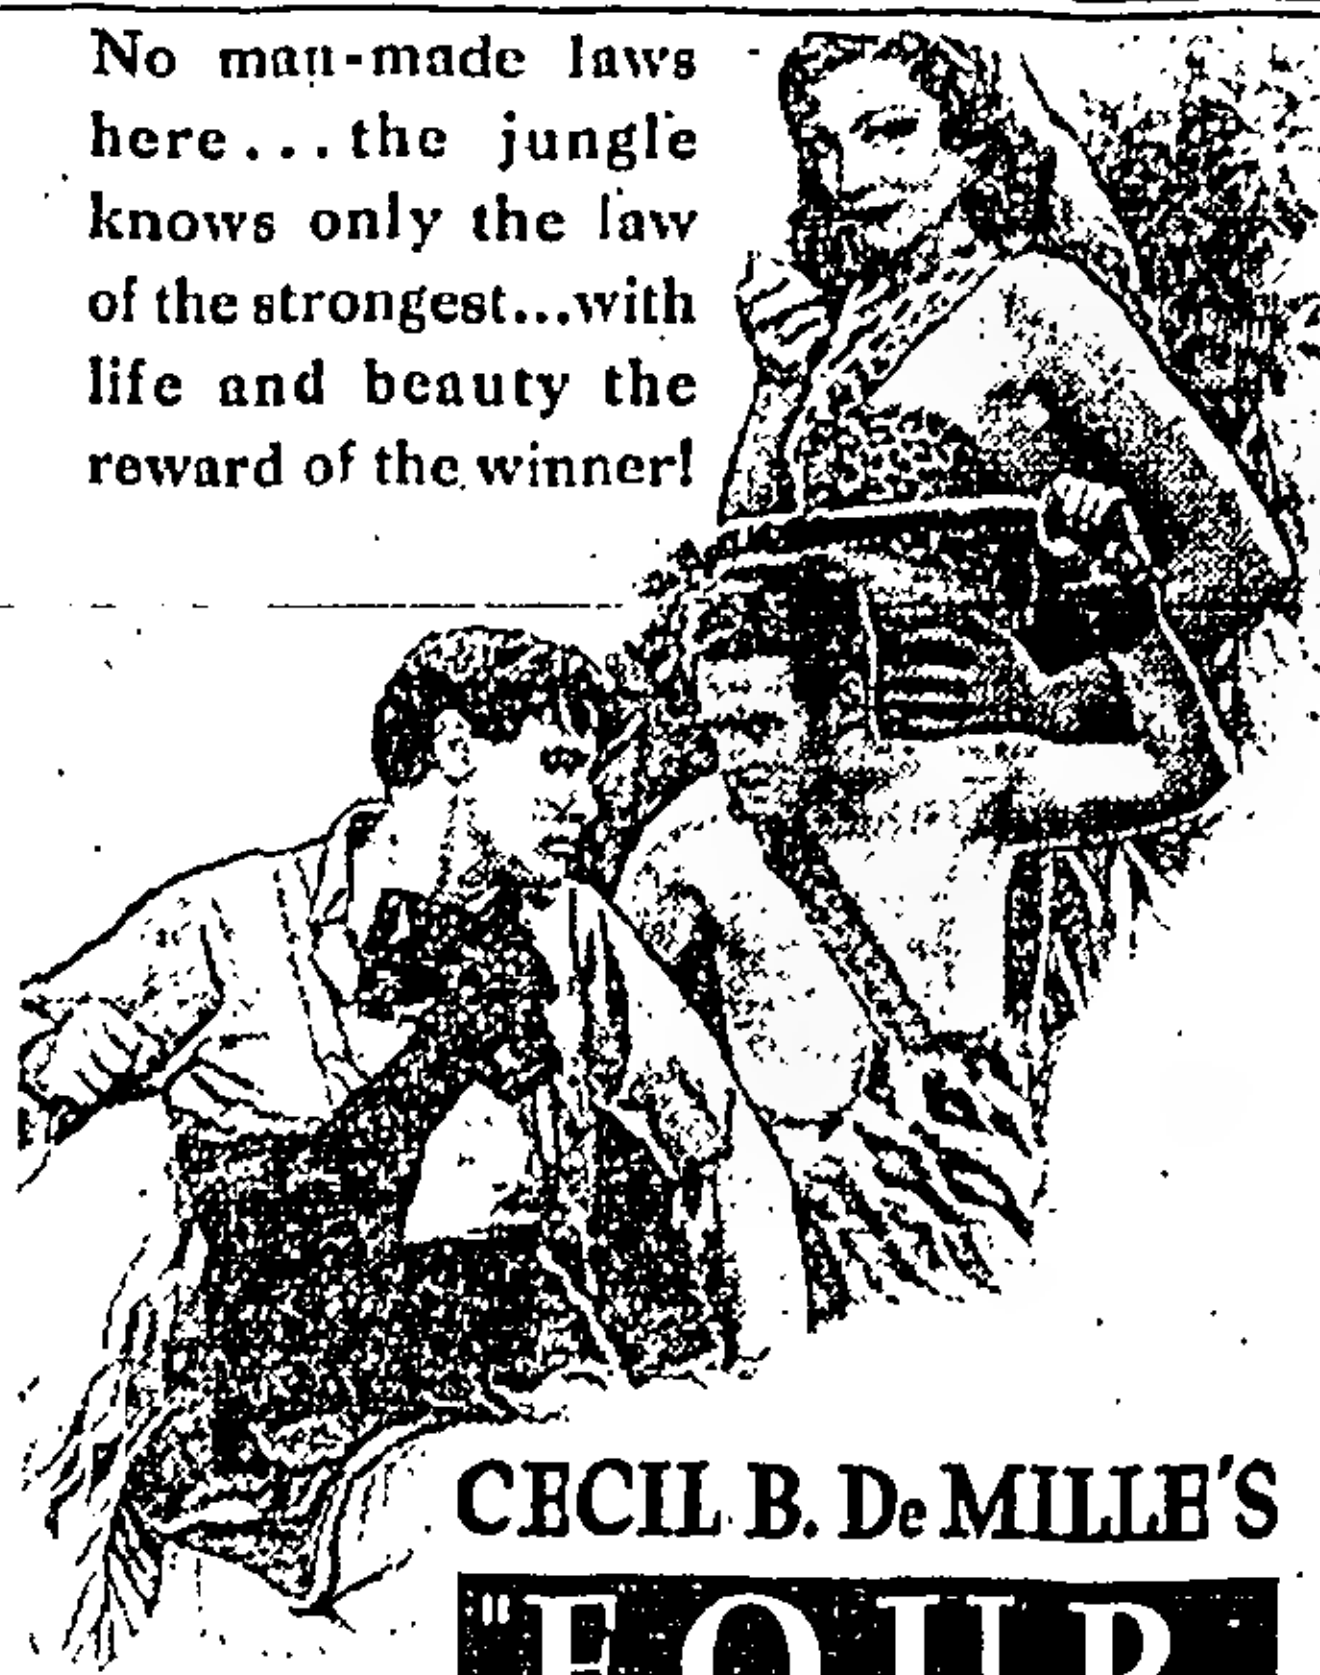

The Hague, June 26. It is reliably reported that the Dutch East India Government is replacing the export duty on native rubber as soon as possible by a system of individual licences.

Meanwhile the latest available information shows that the potential capacity of native rubber production is considerably lower than was previously estimated.—Hester.

BETTY NUTHALL BEATEN IN HUGE CURRENCY EXPANSION WIMBLEDON FIRST ROUND BY EXPLOITING SILVER

DE STEFANI LOSES AUSTIN AND PERRY IN GREAT FORM SPECIAL REPORT ON PLAY (Special to "Telegraph")

London, June 27.
Some thrilling tennis was witnessed at Wimbledon today, when sometimes dismal weather conditions unsettled many of the competitors.

The biggest surprise of the day was the elimination of Miss Betty Nuthall in the first round of the women's singles. Mrs. Fearnley-Whittingstall adapted herself to the conditions far better than Betty and after losing the first set, established a clear superiority.

In the men's singles, the first of the "seeded" player to be given a pass-out check was De Stefani. This was not unexpected, however. He gained his place in the top eight as the result of his smart victory over Perry at Antwerp, but he proved far less effective on grass and was not in the same street as George Lott, the American competitor, who won by three sets to one, after losing the first.

Britain's star players have so far exhibited a leisurely mastery over their opponents, and have not been extended. Austin today conceded only four games to Denker (Germany), and Perry gave away the same number to R. Norris-Williams, the American Davis Cup non-playing captain, and wound up once again with a love set.

Henkel (Germany) took Jack Crawford to four sets.
G. P. Hughes went out in the second round, defeated by an American under-graduate at Cambridge University, Davey Jones. This was a match which fluctuated considerably. Jones established a lead of two sets to one, after losing the first. Hughes smashed his way through his opponent in the fourth set, which he took at 6-1 but could not survive the American's battery in the final set, which ended at the tenth game.

MERLIN BEATS BRUGNON.
Significant of the strength of the new French blood was the defeat of Jacques Brugnon by his fellow-countryman, Andre Merlin, who again justified praises of his greatly improved form this season. Merlin was always on top after the second set, won by three sets to one.

Second round results are appended:
G. Lott (U.S.A.) beat De Stefani (Italy), 8-6, 6-3, 6-4.
H. W. Austin (Britain) beat Denker (Germany), 6-1, 6-1, 6-2.
J. Crawford (Australia) beat Henkel (Germany), 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.
F. J. Perry (Britain) beat R. Norris-Williams (U.S.A.), 6-2, 6-2, 6-0.
Nigel Sharpe (Britain) beat Fujikura (Japan), 6-1, 5-6, 1-6, 7-5, 6-4.
Siba (Czechoslovakia) beat Nishimura (Japan), 8-6, 4-6, 8-6, 2-6, 9-7.
R. Menzel (Czechoslovakia) beat A. Gentien (France), 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.
A. Merlin (France) beat J. Brugnon (France), 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.
Davey Jones (U.S.A.) beat G. P. Hughes (Britain), 2-6, 6-4, 7-5, 1-6, 6-4.
Sydney Wood (U.S.A.) beat Ellmer (Switzerland), 6-3, 5-7, 6-0, 7-5.

NEW SHIPS FOR OLD ONE FOR EVERY THREE STATE AID FOR BRITISH SHIPPING

London, June 27.
An important statement of policy regarding State aid for British shipping is to be made in the House of Commons next week.

The programme to be announced is the subject of much speculation, but nearly all the London newspapers agree in their forecasts of the Government plans.

It is stated that Mr. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, will announce on Monday that Government aid for shipping will take the form of special credit facilities for the building of new ships.

Credits will be extended to all companies making application provided old tonnage is scrapped in a ratio of three old ships for every new ship to be built.—Reuter

STEEL HELMETS THREATENED NAZI STABBED IN POMERANIA ALLIANCE END PREDICTED

Berlin, June 26.
Persistent friction among Germany's semi-military organisations is expected to come to a head as the result of a stabbing affair yesterday.

It is thought probable in some quarters that only the Nazi Stormtroops will now be permitted to continue in existence.
The dissolution of the old nationalist Steel Helmet organisation of ex-Servicemen throughout Germany is foreshadowed by the Völkischer Beobachter, the Nazi Party organ, which, referring to the stabbing in Pomerania of a Nazi storm-trooper by a member of the Steel Helmet organisation, which is supposed to have been working side by side with the Nazis, says that the existence of the Steel Helmets as a unit now appears to be no longer tolerable.

LOCAL CAPTAIN DIVORCED WIFE'S PETITION IN ENGLAND AN UNDEFENDED SUIT

On the grounds that her husband Capt. Joseph Crosthwaite had committed misconduct with a Chinese girl in Hongkong, Mrs. Winifred Mary Crosthwaite, who gave her address as Empress Avenue, The Drive, Ilford, was granted an undefended petition in the Divorce Court last month before the President, Sir Boyd Merriam.

During the hearing it was stated that the parties were married at Hackney Register Office on September 26, 1918, and later came to live in Hongkong. Mrs. Crosthwaite returned to England for a time in 1930, and on her return to the Colony found that her husband had committed misconduct with a Chinese girl.

HEAVY PURCHASES PLANNED RATIO POLICY PROGRAMME COMPLETION BY END OF YEAR?

Washington, June 26.
Huge currency expansion by the employment of silver as legal metallic reserve is planned as a recovery measure, according to prominent spokesmen of the government.

Members of the Administration believe that the new silver purchases plan will cause a currency expansion of at least $940,000,000, with a corresponding increase in commodity prices by the end of the present year.

This was disclosed in official quarters, after Senator Dies had announced that the Treasury Department had already bought about 70,000,000 ounces, although, he said, the exact amount could not be positively ascertained because the white metal was being purchased on American account in markets throughout the world, and the Treasury tabulations were not yet up-to-date.

It is reported elsewhere that the average price paid hitherto for silver by the Treasury has been 44 cents an ounce.

TREASURY NEEDS.
Senator Dies said the Bureau of Printing and Engraving is far behind schedule in the printing of new silver certificates to be issued on the basis of the metal.

He said he estimated that the Treasury would need to buy 1,254,000,000 ounces to comply with the new law requiring purchases until silver constitutes 25 per cent. of its monetary reserve.

It is estimated that the above figure, added to what the Government already owns will give the United States about 2,000,000,000 ounces.

75 CENTS AN OUNCE.
Treasury officials arrived at their $940,000,000 estimate by multiplying 1,254,000,000 ounces by 75 cents, saying the United States would be lucky if it obtained around one-fifth of the world's total supply without paying more than an average of 75 cents an ounce.—Reuter

TREASURY STATEMENT.
Washington, June 26.
An indication of the rate of the Treasury purchases of silver is given in an official statement of Treasury bullion transactions issued today.

The announcement shows that silver receipts under the executive order of December 12 last, authorising the purchase of all newly-mined silver at 64.5 cents an ounce, amounted, up to June 22, to 8,945,000 ounces.

Total purchases for the week ended June 22 on this account were 380,632 ounces.

Jimmy Walker, in an interview with Reuter, stated that he had not accepted the offer, despite the fact that it was a very generous one.

Heads You'll Win Style in Spring Hats!

The Breton, the bonnet, the off-the-face sailor. With these in her wardrobe, no spring style can fail her.

And true enough, these three types completely cover topper territory for the younger set. They're all very flattering to the face of youth. Although some of these hats are worn far, far to the rear, tiny elastics or ribbon ties keep them in place despite early spring breezes.

White straw cloth forms the Breton shown at the top left of the sketch. The crown has a squarish look and is banded and bowed with wide navy blue grosgrain.

To the right of this, a Buster Brownish sailor of fine black milan is banded in white grosgrain and held tightly to the head with a narrow black elastic band.

A prim little navy milan bonnet, shown at the bottom left of the sketch covers only the back of the head. A pie-crust ruffle of white milan extends across the front and ribbon ties of navy grosgrain keep it in place.

Quaint is the word for the Empire bonnet at the bottom right of beige straw. Brown ribbons trim its high square crown and its truly poke-brim frames a fair face to advantage.

Hats off to off-the-face hats!

PICKLES AND CHUTNIES

Some Home-Made Examples

Pickles and chutnies lend themselves admirably to home manufacture, and should find a place on the shelves of every store cupboard.

There is unlimited scope for individual taste and ingenuity in combining different ingredients to give distinctive flavours.

Fruit and vegetables should be fresh, sound, and under rather than over ripe, and they should be washed and dried very thoroughly before using.

Fruit intended for chutney should preferably be of the acid variety, e.g., apples, plums, ripe or green tomatoes, &c.

Onion, garlic, sugar, spices, &c., are added to give flavour and piquancy, and the whole mixed with a preserving agent, e.g., vinegar.

The very best vinegar should be used for all preserving purposes. Best brown vinegar is to be recommended for all ordinary pickles and chutnies. For the more delicate preserves, the best white vinegar should be used.

A good chutney, whatever the ingredients, should have a mellow, piquant flavour, and should be of a smooth consistency. To obtain this result, all the ingredients should be very finely chopped and cooked slowly for two to three hours.

It is not advisable to add flavourings after the chutney is cooked as this spoils the smoothness of the preserve and the piquancy of the flavour.

Metal Utensils Harmful
Metal pans and utensils, particularly copper, should never be used either in the making or the storing of pickles and chutnies.

Un glazed earthenware or enamel vessels and wooden spoons are desirable and safe when vinegar is being used.

If a metal pan must be used, one made from iron produces the least injurious effects. The preserve should be stored in glass jars so that any fermentation may be detected—these jars should be clean, dry, and hot. It is a saving to use vacuum jars as it does away with that tiresome process "fastening down."

There are many old and tried recipes for making chutney amongst them being:—

Apple or Pear Chutney

Ingredients.—1 pint vinegar, 1 lb. brown sugar, 1 lb. sultanas, 1½ lb. apples or pears, 1 lb. onions, ¼ oz. ginger, 1 teaspoonful cayenne, ¼ teaspoonful allspice, 1 tablespoonful salt.

Chop the apples or pears, onions and sultanas very finely, add sugar, ginger, cayenne, salt, and vinegar. Boil gently for three hours. Turn into warm, dry jars, and cover securely.

Tomato Chutney

Ingredients.—2 lb. tomatoes, ½ lb. onions, 2 bananas, ½ lb. raisins, ¼ lb. preserved ginger, 1 oz. salt, 1½ lb. brown sugar, 2½ pints vinegar, ¼ oz. cayenne.

Slice tomatoes and bananas, chop onions, raisins, and ginger. Place all ingredients in a pan and boil gently until thick (30-40 minutes).

CHAPTER XXXVI

Elsa came back to work on her old schedule and, with the suddenness of a butterfly released from its nest, Gypsy began to rush about whenever she was free. David was in good hands when Elsa was present. He and the clumsy but gentle-fingered maid understood each other and Gypsy could play with an easy mind. This was what she needed, she told herself, what she had been wanting.

She had known a gay, irresponsible crowd in her pre-marital days. She went back to them now. She went to cocktail parties in Greenwich Village, exhibitions of modern paintings, motion picture showings to the inner circle. She bought some new clothes and had a new, daring hair cut. In many ways she was the gay, pleasure-loving girl she had been before her marriage. She laughed a great deal. She had begun to learn the newest dancing steps. The telephone rang often these days and she would sit, drumming her fingers, trying to decide whether or not she could make that particular tea or whether Elsa could be persuaded to stay late again.

Tom said he approved of the change, although sometimes you caught a puzzled light in his eyes. This chameleon, this flushed, dark-haired young person in the well cut gray suit was curiously unlike the discouraged, pallid girl who had complained last winter of the routine of dishes, bottles and naps. Since Gypsy's return she hadn't said a single word about their old difficulties. She had behaved as though nothing had ever happened to disturb her placidity. He didn't quite understand the change but he was grateful for it.

Manlike, he was interested in and attracted by the transformation. Of course Gypsy was his girl—his wife—no matter how she looked nor what she did to herself. But, although he approved her gaiety and spirit in theory, sometimes he missed the old Gypsy with her serious talk of budgets and cheap cuts and her adorable frown over the laundry list. This girl was far too busy to bother with laundry lists. There were buttons missing from Tom's things nowadays and his brown and blue socks had holes in the toes. Often he came home in the evening to find her still away and Elsa muttering over the pots and pans, anxious to put on her big shapely hat and remove herself to that mysterious realm from which she would emerge the next working day.

Tom would be left to give David his bottle. Presently Gypsy would flash in with a gardenia at her throat and the scent of cigarettes clinging to her cool, fresh cheeks. "Sorry, darling. I had no idea it was so late. Ronny Burgess had a Russian violinist and it was so thrilling!"

She would tie a big apron over her sheer black frock with its frilly collar. Smiling still over the afternoon, she would serve Tom cold ham and potato chips and salad. She seldom bothered to cook much now. For one thing, the weather was growing warmer. For another, she hadn't the time and Elsa was a most indifferent chef. Besides Tom didn't care. He used to be bored, she thought now, with all those fancy messes she had prepared for him. That was little bride stuff! Well, she had got bravely over that phase.

It was thrilling—it was exhilarating to be received back into the old circle as an equal. At first people had openly patronized her. "How's the baby?" they had asked negligently. "How's motherhood?"

But they had got past that now. She was one of them. She had even joined a class in sculpture, and it was, she said, "inspiring." It was queer but the prospect of spending the summer in the apartment didn't daunt her now. Last year she had been unable to bear the very notion. But that had been because of her condition. She felt strong now and it was fun to be within reach of things. Why, if she moved to the suburbs she would miss out on all the invitations she now accepted so eagerly. No one would remember her if she buried herself in some little house on a side road.

When Tom said something about trying to find a place on the island she smiled and shook her head. "Don't bother, darling. We'll be all right. I don't mind the city any more. Besides, everyone says we're going to have a cool summer."

The puzzled look came into his eyes again and he said no more. More often than not Gypsy encountered Hunt Gibson at these festivities. Hunt was very much the young-man-about-town at the moment and he had met these people through Sue Canavan. The more Gypsy saw of him the better she liked him. He was always so amusing. He had a grand sense of humour. You saw him on the avenue these days, broad shoulders set off to advantage by his well-fitting British clothes. He swung a stick. Girls riding to the tops of buses craned their necks to see him. "Oh," they said. "Isn't he like Gary Cooper?"

He would offer Gypsy a lift uptown as they left the Eighth street studio—Ronny's or Elspeth Harris' place on Barrow street.

"Coming my way?" he would say, smiling.

Gypsy would waver. "I was going to stop at the French pastry shop on Sixth and get some brioche for breakfast."

"Well, come along. The taxi can wait, can't it?"

It was fun; it was all fun. To play at being a girl again, to pretend for a little while there were no responsibilities, no worries. Of course you always went home to the baby and Tom with a thankful feeling. It was wonderful, back of all this playing and laughing and chatting, to feel that your life was secure, settled. Just the same, the dash of freedom made Gypsy rounder, rosier, prettier than she had been in years.

She looked about her at the people she knew, the completely unfettered ones, and found that she did not envy them. Elspeth was thin, hard, nervous at 29; in love with a married man from Park avenue. Ronny had been married and divorced and so had Willa Burns and one or two of the other girls. None of them had children. She would rush into the apartment after an afternoon punctuated by frenzied chatter, scented with cigarette smoke and the dregs of a cocktail shaker. She would bury her face in the pink warmth and sweetness of David's baby neck.

"Was he good, Elsa?"

"Oh, sure, he fine." Elsa would wriggle out of her apron.

"Take his carrots all right?"

"Ya, he eat um all up."

"Well, now I've got to settle down to business." She would hum a dance tune, looking abstractedly into the icebox. Asparagus and cold lamb and a salad; Tom would like that. She wasn't hungry. Those pate sandwiches had been so good. The door would slam. Tom would be in the doorway. "Hello, darling!"

She would smile at him in the old welcoming way and he would fold her in his long arms. "Been painting the town again?"

"Yes, Oh, I must tell you. Ronny has the most marvellous idea. . . ."

She would talk eagerly all through dinner and would not notice particularly if he were unresponsive.

"Don't you think so?"

"Umm. . . ." Tom would stare at her, that puzzled small-boy ex-

One of the most remarkable pictures taken during the Toledo strike riots is this, showing a rioter after he had caught a smoking gas grenade flung by an Ohio guardsman and hurled it back into the troops' ranks. The picture plainly shows the grenade just after it had left his hand. In the left, through the trees, is shown part of the crowd of thousands watching the affray.

Choking clouds of gas hurried back 1,000 rioters at the Electric Auto-Lite plant in Toledo, O., as shown in this vivid picture, but they returned to maintain the siege of 1,200 strike breakers trapped in the factory building until militia arrived to clear the area. With snipers firing from nearby buildings, torches being flung through windows of the plant, shown rear right, by the howling mob, and pitched battles in the streets, terror reigned for two days and nights at the plant, where $150,000 damage resulted, with scores wounded.

REPRISALS THREAT

ANGLO-GERMAN DISPUTE

DIMMER HOPE OF AGREEMENT

London, June 26.

Hopes of an amicable settlement of the Anglo-German debt dispute have been dimmed by the nature of a statement issued in Berlin prior to the departure for London of the German delegation.

The German Government regrets, the statement declared, that it is unable to accept the arguments of Britain which seem to have been based upon a misunderstanding of the proceedings at the Berlin transfer conference.

The German Government also regrets that the British Government thinks it necessary to enforce its viewpoint by threatening compulsory measures, whereby Germany is compelled to take corresponding defensive measures. The German debt delegates have since arrived in London, driving to a hotel from Liverpool Street in a taxicab driven, strangely enough, by a Jewish driver.—Reuter.

BRITAIN'S NEGOTIATOR.

Sir Frederick Leith Ross, Chief Economic Adviser to the Government, accompanied by Treasury officials, will conduct the negotiations on behalf of the British Government with the German delegation respecting the German transfer moratorium.

The German representatives who will include Dr. Berger, of the Ministry of Finance, Dr. Ullrich, of the Foreign Office, and Dr. Blessing, a Director of the Reichsbank, will be invited to hold the first meeting at the Treasury to-morrow morning.

BILL PASSES COMMONS.

The Money Resolution in connection with the Debt Clearing Office and Import Restrictions (Reprisals) Bill, passed all stages in the Commons to-day.

When the House went into committee on the bill, a Liberal member moved an amendment to limit its duration to twelve months from 1st July next.

This, he said, would be a gesture to Germany that the British would be prepared not to engage in reprisals but would rather do everything possible to facilitate and increase Anglo-German trade.

The motion was, however, withdrawn when the Chancellor of Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, announced his willingness to limit the operation of the measure to two years.

The Chancellor remarked that the Government's purpose in taking the powers contained in the bill was to give notice to the world that they were so equipped and thereby to reduce the likelihood of circumstances arising which would require these powers to be used.—British Wireless.

FOURTEEN BILLS VETOED

Presidential Slaughter in Washington

Washington, June 26.

After announcing his intention of broadening another message to Congress on Thursday evening, President Roosevelt to-day vetoed no fewer than fourteen routine bills.

They were measures that passed through Congress during the closing days.

The President disregarded the usual custom of allowing the measures to die a natural death for want of the Presidential signature.

Instead, he wrote on each "Disapproved," and that the signature had been withheld, with a brief statement of the reason for refusal to sign appended.—Reuter.

HELIUM GAS FIND IN AMERICA

ACQUIRED FOR THE GOVERNMENT

Washington, June 26.

The acquisition of all gas rights in the fifty-thousand acre cliffside helium-gas bearing field at Amarillo, Texas, for a reserve supply for the defence services has been announced by the Federal Bureau of Mines.—Reuter.

DEVASTATING FLOODS IN KONGMOON DISTRICT

RUSSIAN TO BE DEPORTED

NO CAUSE FOR COMING TO COLONY

Alexis A. Nikitjok, a Russian, remanded from yesterday on a charge of having entered the Colony without a valid passport last Sunday, appeared before Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Detective Sergeant Mottram said that a Mr. Rakusini had borrowed $600 from defendant's father in Harbin last year, and defendant had been authorised to collect the money. Mr. Rakusini had already paid back over $400, and had written to defendant when he was in Macao on June 16, telling defendant his financial matters would be settled in September next. In spite of this, defendant had come to Hongkong. Mr. Rakusini maintained that he only owed defendant about $150 more.

Mr. Hamilton remarked that he could not help it, as he did not have any jurisdiction in regard to a transaction which had taken place outside the Colony. It was defendant's own fault for coming to Hongkong.

An order for expulsion was made, and Mr. Hamilton warned defendant he was not to come back without getting a proper visa.

JAPANESE WAITRESS CHARGED.

A 19-year-old Japanese waitress of Nagasaki, Kikue Shibahara, was also charged with having entered the Colony without a valid passport, and in order of expulsion was made against her.

Detective Sergeant Mottram said that defendant presented herself for registration yesterday, and inquiries then made showed that she had arrived in the Colony on board a Japanese steamer, the Lushan Maru, on June 10, from Shanghai. She had no passport. On the steamer's list, she was shown as a through passenger to Canton, but it transpired she had never been to Canton. She had a sister, who was employed as a waitress in Hongkong, and apparently came here to join her.

HOLIDAY CRUISE FOR ROOSEVELT

VISITING HAITI AND COLOMBIA

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph Copyright. Telegraphic Message No. 27, 2.22 a.m.)

Washington, June 26.

President Roosevelt is making plans for a long cruise while Congress election battles are being waged, which will probably end up finally in Honolulu.

It was revealed to-day that the President proposes to pay a visit to Haiti, and that he will then proceed to Cartagena, where he will have lunch with the President of Colombia.—United Press.

POLISH TRADE DELEGATION

OFFICIALS ARRIVE IN LONDON

London, June 26.

Monsieur Sokolowski, of the Polish Ministry of Industry and Commerce, and Monsieur Rose, of the Ministry of Agriculture, who are heading the Polish delegation to negotiate with the British Government a new trade agreement, arrived in London to-day.

The delegation will be formally

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

"THE GREAT TRAGEDIES OF HISTORY HAVE NOT BEEN CAUSED BY WEAKNESS, BUT BY THE ABUSE OF POWER."

Falling into the hold whilst working aboard the steamer Cape St. Francis, Chu Him, a labourer, was sent to the Government Civil Hospital suffering from injuries of a severe nature.

Knocked down by motor-car No. 2100 in Johnston Road, Wanchoi district, yesterday, a child, Wong Tai, of No. 13 Cross Street, received leg injuries and was sent to the Government Civil Hospital for treatment.

Ho Wun, a married woman, was cautioned by Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on a summons of having failed to notify the change of address of her registered mail. Sub-inspector Fraser, of the S.C.A., remarked that the mail-lady was well cared for, and was sent to school and treated as a member of the family.

TEN FEET OF WATER IN TOISHAN CITY.

SHANGHAI HEAT WAVE DEATHS

Kongmoon, June 26.

As the result of torrential rains in the past few days, the city of Toishan is being submerged in some places to a depth of more than ten feet.

Numerous houses, bridges, roads and other means of communication have been wrecked, including a section of the Ning-Yang railway and the telephone, telegraph and electric light systems.

The city was plunged into darkness for almost twenty hours on Sunday.

Three railway bridges were carried off by the flood, while numerous sleepers were destroyed. Railway communication cannot be restored to Toishan for several days.

The losses sustained by the Ning-Yang Railroad company alone are estimated at over $150,000.

The flood is now showing signs of receding.—Central News.

SHANGHAI HEAT WAVE.

Shanghai, June 27.

Cases of sunstroke and heat prostration are mounting up in consequence of the persistence of record-breaking high temperatures in Shanghai and the surrounding districts. Scores of sufferers from prostration and sun stroke have been stricken in the countryside, mostly farmers and coolies, threatening to create a serious situation.—Central News.

YELLOW RIVER FLOODS.

Tientsin, June 27.

The continued rise of the Yellow River, especially the section running across Hopei Province, has caused widespread floods at several points in that province. The districts already flooded include Fengyiu, Huangling and Pantang, where thousands of refugees are in need of immediate relief.

The Hopei Provincial Government has urged the Yellow River Conservancy Bureau to take emergency measures to strengthen dykes in order to prevent an extension of the flood disaster.—Central News.

SIX DEATHS.

Shanghai, June 27.

The heat wave caused six deaths in Shanghai from heatstroke yesterday, although a strong breeze brought some relief.

The populace took advantage of a burst twenty-inch water-main near the General Hospital which turned the vicinity into a lake.

There has been a general abatement of crime in the last two days. There have been no armed robberies and no street fights.—Reuter.

Other items include $4,800 for alterations and equipment at the registration office in connection with the Registration of Persons Ordinance, and $1,308 for certain courses of instruction for Mr. E.B. Nelson in connection with his appointment as Assistant Superintendent of Aerodrome.

JAPANESE STRIKE'S POLICE SERGEANT

DRUNKENNESS PLEA IN COURT

"If you assault the police again, either when sober or drunk, and are convicted before me, I shall send you to prison without the option of a fine," the police are not here to be knocked about by drunkards," remarked Mr. Hamilton, when imposing fines totalling $35, or six weeks' imprisonment, on a Japanese shopkeeper, Hayashi Sagara, charged with disorderly conduct in Lockhart Road and assaulting Sergeant Reddish early this morning.

Sergeant Reddish stated that he was on patrol at 12.45 a.m. to-day, when he heard a woman's cry. He turned, and saw the defendant, push a female night-soil cooler off the pavement. He went up to enquire, and defendant turned round and said in English, "I am a Japanese." Defendant then struck him on the chest, knocking him off the pavement. Defendant then began shouting and behaving in a disorderly manner. The night-soil cooler ran away. Defendant appeared to be drunk.

Defendant replied that he did not remember anything, as he was drunk at the time.

Mr. Hamilton convicted, imposing a fine of $10, or two weeks on the first charge, and $25, or one month on the second count.

CHILD'S BODY DUMPED

FINE IMPOSED ON WOMAN

"He died as I was taking him to a doctor," pleaded a woman named Chan Sum, aged 34, who was charged at the Kowloon Magistracy before Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning with dumping a dead body in Yenchow Street yesterday.

Detective Sergeant Poyntz stated that defendant was seen near the Shamshui Police Station yesterday carrying something in her arms. Her behaviour aroused the suspicion of the officers who saw her, and an Indian constable was sent out to follow her. She went into a side lane in Yenchow Street and deposited a parcel there. This was later found to be a dead male child aged five months.

His Worship:—What did the child die of?

Sergeant Poyntz:—Bronchial pneumonia, your Worship. A fine of $25 was imposed.

SUSSEX ESTABLISH A FIRM COUNTY CRICKET LEADERSHIP

THE ROUTING OF YORKSHIRE

JAS. JANGRIDGE JUST MISSES DISTINCTION

London, June 26.

The really important county cricket match during the last three days was that between Yorkshire and Sussex at Sheffield. But the numerous calls made by the Test match on the Yorkshire strength hardly allowed a fair trial of ability between the teams, and Sussex, taking advantage of the position, won by an innings.

The effect was to leave Sussex high and dry leaders of the championship table, while Kent, as a result of their win over Lancashire, renew their challenge to Yorkshire for second place. Yorkshire, batting went to pieces against the three Sussex attack bowlers, James Langridge, probably the most complete all-rounder to have Test honours elude him, John Parks and Bert Wonsley.

Langridge was very unlucky in Yorkshire's second innings, just failing to achieve the distinction of taking all ten wickets in an innings. His nine victims cost but 34 runs. This was good enough to send Yorkshire back for 116 after they had previously been dismissed by Wonsley (6 for 46) and Parks (4 for 37) for 126. Sussex were able to declare their one and only innings at 357 for 5 wickets.

SMART ESSEX WIN.

Essex accomplished a smart performance in beating Hampshire by nine wickets. There were only four runs between the teams at the close of the first innings, Hampshire scoring 305 to 301 for Essex.

The Essex innings was featured by a century by Cutmore and some great bowling by Kennedy, who sent back seven batsmen for 73 runs.

Hampshire fared ill in their second attempt, being all out for 148, and Essex, making light of their task, hit off the 154 runs for the loss of a single wicket.

The clock played an important part in the result of the Derbyshire v Northants match. Northants made a big effort to force an outright decision, but when stumps were drawn they were still 86 runs behind with seven wickets down.

Rain affected both the Nottingham v Worcestershire and Gloucestershire v Gloucestershire matches. Nottingham were robbed of victory, and Gloucestershire had to remain content to take four points, there being no decision on the first innings.

UNSUCCESSFUL DECLARATION.

One of the most interesting games in the first class programme, although it was not a county championship engagement, was that between Surrey and Oxford, which ended in a five wicket win for Surrey after the University had declared in their second innings.

To Oxford's first knock of 305, Surrey responded with 483. The University batted a second time for 280 for 7 and then declared—a very bold move.

Surrey, however, were equal to the occasion, and hit off the 103 runs for victory with ease.

The detailed scores which will be found in these columns were cabled by Reuter.

COTTON SETS NEW GOLF RECORD

AMAZING 66 IN BRITISH OPEN

OLD OXFORD BLUE DOES WELL

Arthur Havers, the last Englishman to win the British open golf championship, who yesterday failed to qualify.

London, June 26.

The qualifying rounds of the British Open Golf Championship were commenced to-day over the Royal Cinque Ports Course at Deal and the Royal St. George's at Sandwich. There are 202 starters but there are some notable absences, including Cyril Tolley, John Devereux, Vardon and others.

The day was warm, sunny and windless and conditions generally were ideal.

Henry Cotton, entered from Brussels, always full of surprises, broke the course record at St. George's by two strokes, having a card of 66. His score was a remarkable one, with eleven birdies and one eagle, going out in 31 and coming in in 35.

Martin, the former Oxford Blue, broke the amateur record at Deal with a card of 70.

The American title-holder, Shute, was playing listlessly to-day and not convincingly, but he, like Cotton, generally can be counted on to surprise the competition. He had a 70 at St. George's. Gene Sarazen and Macdonald Smith had 75 at Deal. Joe Kirkwood had 76 at St. George's.

Other prominent players, such as Aubrey Boomer of France, Delatorre, of Spain, and Denny Gadd had 71; Nolan, Ernest Whitcombe, Reginald Whitcombe and August Boyer of France had 73 each; Padgham and Charles Whitcombe were 74 and McLean, Compton and Munn, disappointingly, scored 76.—Reuter.

Reflections On Second Test

Importance Of The Follow-On: Where England Were Rather Lucky

(By R. Abbit)

I imagine that yesterday morning, when there arose a gasp of surprise. As we were about the weather at Lord's over the week-end, to see in our newspaper was a definite result of it was, and we are now absolutely square all round. We have on each side won fifty-two games. But, more than this, the particular series of matches. In the first Test beat us, though not so badly as we beat them. bat on a badly worn wicket, it was, so far as one beast as they had on Monday last.

It would be absurd to read too much into our victory. We are, of course, delighted at it, and we are full of praise and admiration for the men who brought it off, especially Verity. But consider the facts. We had done very nicely on Friday, and our total of 440 was quite satisfactory. But Australia did just as well—192 for two.

And then, it seems, "the rains descended and the floods came, and after a dull early morning, a hot sun came out! To your tents, O Australia!

The wicket turned to a glue-pot, and we had the very man for the situation in Hedley Verity. More power to him. But for goodness sake do not let us get puffed up and chesty about it. I am convinced that had the position been reversed, Grimmett and O'Reilly would have shot us out just as easily. So it is all square.

THE KEY POSITION.

To my mind, the whole crux of the situation was the question of the follow-on. In a three (or more) day match a side has to lead by 150 runs to be able to enforce the follow-on.

Now, what would have been Wyatt's position if the Australians had saved the follow-on? He would have been less than 150 runs on, with a glue-pot to bat on, and the knowledge that his men might well be out by the close of play for some hundred runs and so leave the Australians with less than three hundred to get on a wicket that might well roll out slow and easy on the Tuesday!

And it was touch and go. At one period Australia, with only eight wickets down, only wanted six runs to do it. And Chippfield was not into our victory. But this was just after the lunch interval, and he had not got set again. At 234 the last two wickets fell, and in my opinion, the match was lost with them.

THE HOUR AND THE MAN.

The hero of the occasion is Hedley Verity, of Yorkshire. He took 15 wickets for 104 runs, a feat which I believe to be without precedent in the history of Test cricket with Australia. No-one in test cricket has taken more than seventeen wickets in a match (I speak subject to correction), and this has only been done eleven times in first-class county cricket.

Besides these cases, S. F. Barnes took 17 for 160 against S. Africa in the year before the war. I ought to mention that these figures do not include the 1933 season. Verity has older than many of the crickets have been, when he sprang into prominence. Born in 1905, it is not until 1930 that he appears in the bowling analysis in Wisden. I tabulate his figures since in round numbers, disregarding for ranking purposes those bowlers who only took a handful of wickets.

THE REST OF THE TEAM.

I must admit that in an article I published recently, I seem to have Nigel Sharpe, the man who beat Fujikura at Wimbledon yesterday.

FUJIKURA, NISHIMURA AND MIKI ALL DEFEATED

YAMAGISHI ONLY SURVIVOR

NIGEL SHARPE, GIANT KILLER, CAUSES ANOTHER UPSET

Yesterday was Japan's black day at Wimbledon. Only Yamagishi remains to keep the flag flying. Nishimura, Fujikura and Miki all figured in surprising defeats. Their fates were settled by a Czechoslovakian, Englishman and Australian respectively.

Nigel Sharpe, the man who has appeared in more sensational victories at Wimbledon than any other player of his calibre, was again to the fore with a great victory at the expense of Fujikura.

Sharpe, who does not figure in the first twelve English ranking players, overcame Japan's third ranking singles player five sets.

London, June 26.

One of the most dramatic matches at Wimbledon to-day was the second round meeting of Josef Siba, the Czechoslovakian Davis Cup player, and Nishimura, Japan's leading singles exponent. The Japanese lost after having a comparatively easy victory in his grasp.

Nishimura was set point at 5-4 in the first set. In the third set it rained and the ball kept low which disconcerted Nishimura.

The sun came out in the fourth stanza, enabling the Japanese to rush the net, and he took the set quite comfortably.

The fifth set was a test of endurance after Nishimura had led 4-1. To general surprise he allowed Siba to draw up and lead 5-4, after which the Japanese fired rapidly, but held out until the sixteenth game, when the Czech went to his points and a sensational victory.

Nigel Sharpe, a previous giant-killer at Wimbledon, with wins over Cochet, de Morpurgo and others, struck his top form to beat Fujikura in five sets.

Sharpe was completely in the ascendant from the baseline, but occasionally went to the net with success.

Fujikura preferred to play the Englishman from the rear of the court, and both players exchanged some brilliant drives. Some of Sharpe's recoveries were highly spectacular.

Rain stopped the game half way through, and when it was resumed, Fujikura could not keep to his feet, and slipping all over the court, lost his touch.

FRENCHMAN CHASED.

When Yamagishi, the Japanese Davis Cup player took the court against Le Sueur the Frenchman the sky was overcast and there was a fairly high wind, threatening rain. Only 6,000 people were present at the All England Tennis Club to watch the day's play.

RESULTS IN BRIEF.

MEN'S SINGLES.

Second Round

D. R. Turnbull (Australia) beat R. Miki (Japan) 6-3, 6-1, 6-1.
J. Siba (Czechoslovakia) beat H. Nishimura (Japan) 8-6, 4-6, 8-6, 2-6, 9-7.
J. Yamagishi (Japan) beat Le Sueur (France) 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.
Nigel Sharpe (Britain) beat J. Fujikura (Japan) 6-4, 3-6, 1-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Yamagishi enjoyed an easy win over the French left-hander. The Japanese indulged in a perfect display of fine driving, to the sidelines, at the same time covering every inch of the net in a spectacular manner. He chased the Frenchman all over the court, and was always the master.

MIKI LOSES FORM.

R. Miki, not the least of the Japanese "hopes," disappointed his friends with a display against Don Turnbull, the Australian, much below form. Miki found great difficulty in returning Turnbull's cannon-ball services, generally skying them out of court. He was also uneven in his ground strokes, continually finding the net. Miki's only bright moments were at the net, where he often pulled out some delightful winning shots.—Reuter.

Warning To Reckless Jockeys

SEQUEL TO MANY ACCIDENTS

Following the chapter of accidents which took place in the Chester Cup, in which three horses fell, one of them, Lord Carnarvon's Sibell, being later destroyed, unofficial complaints have reached the Stewards of the Jockey Club concerning rough and reckless riding.

At a meeting of the Club held at Newmarket Mr. G. D. Smith, the Senior Steward, said the Stewards hoped that all members, when acting as local Stewards, would deal severely with any such cases which were brought before them. He said that the Stewards proposed to repeat, in "The Racing Calendar," the notice to jockeys which was published in 1929, and which would warn jockeys that such behaviour would not be tolerated.

THE WARNING.

This notice reads:—"The Stewards of the Jockey Club warn all jockeys that reckless, careless and erratic riding will not be tolerated. They have requested Stewards of all meetings to report to the Registry Office all such cases, and any jockey so reported will be liable at once to have his licence withdrawn under Rule 17, or to be suspended by the Stewards of the Jockey Club for such period as they may decide."

After the mishap at Chester, which doubtless provoked the Jockey Club to draw attention to the rules regarding rough riding, an inquiry into the affair was held, but there was insufficient evidence to decide on whom the blame should be placed, and no further steps therefore could be taken. Even so, the accident was one which never should have occurred and it is hoped that the warning of the Stewards will have the desired effect in stamping out a tendency which is only in the worst interests of racing.

LAWN BOWLS DELAY

Rain Causes Games To Be Postponed

Yesterday's rain caused a slight delay in the lawn bowls championship matches when it was necessary to postpone the games which were down for decision.

Owing to the departure from the Colony of W. Glendinning, the Fairs match between the Kowloon B.B.C. pair, V. Petherick and J. Watson, and the Police couple, A. E. Carey and W. Glendinning, has been cancelled, the latter giving their opponents a walk over.

The match between C. J. Tachi and U. Perkins in the Singles Championship, for Monday next, has been postponed until Wednesday, Monday being a holiday. Likewise the game between J. Hodgkin and R. Bass has been postponed, although no date for this game has yet been fixed.

ANOTHER TENNIS CLUB FOR SHANGHAI

AMBITIOUS OBJECTS IN VIEW

KHOO HOOI-HYE TAKES OVER SECRETARSHIP

RAOUL CARNAVARRO APPOINTED AS INSTRUCTOR

As further evidence of the increasing popularity of tennis in Shanghai, and in response to a demand for more and better playing facilities, still another club has been newly organized, known as the Shanghai Tennis Club, this following hard upon the inauguration of the Cathay Tennis Club. The newest club takes over the tennis grounds formerly occupied by the Chinese National Amateur Athletic Federation, at the Pioneer Field, located at the corner of Rue Chapal and Rue Conty.

The Shanghai Tennis Club has been formed by a group of enthusiasts whose object is purely the promotion of sport and sportsmanship, and it is their hope to promote international goodwill through this medium. For that reason, the membership has been made open to both Chinese and Foreigners. Aiming at the encouragement of healthy competition, the club will work in close co-operation with the National Amateur Athletic Federation, the Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association, and other tennis clubs, so that Shanghai may see ever better tennis.

AN AMBITIOUS PROGRAMME.

In order to stimulate interest in the game, the club will hold inter-club, inter-collegiate, inter-hong matches, invitation tournaments, and other competitions. It will also invite leading players from other parts of the world to play exhibition matches here. By way of improving the grounds, the club is arranging to lay out six more courts, in addition to the ten now available of which four are hard courts and six grass. A pavilion combining comfort with utility also will shortly be built on the grounds, equipped with baths, other necessities for the convenience of members and guests.

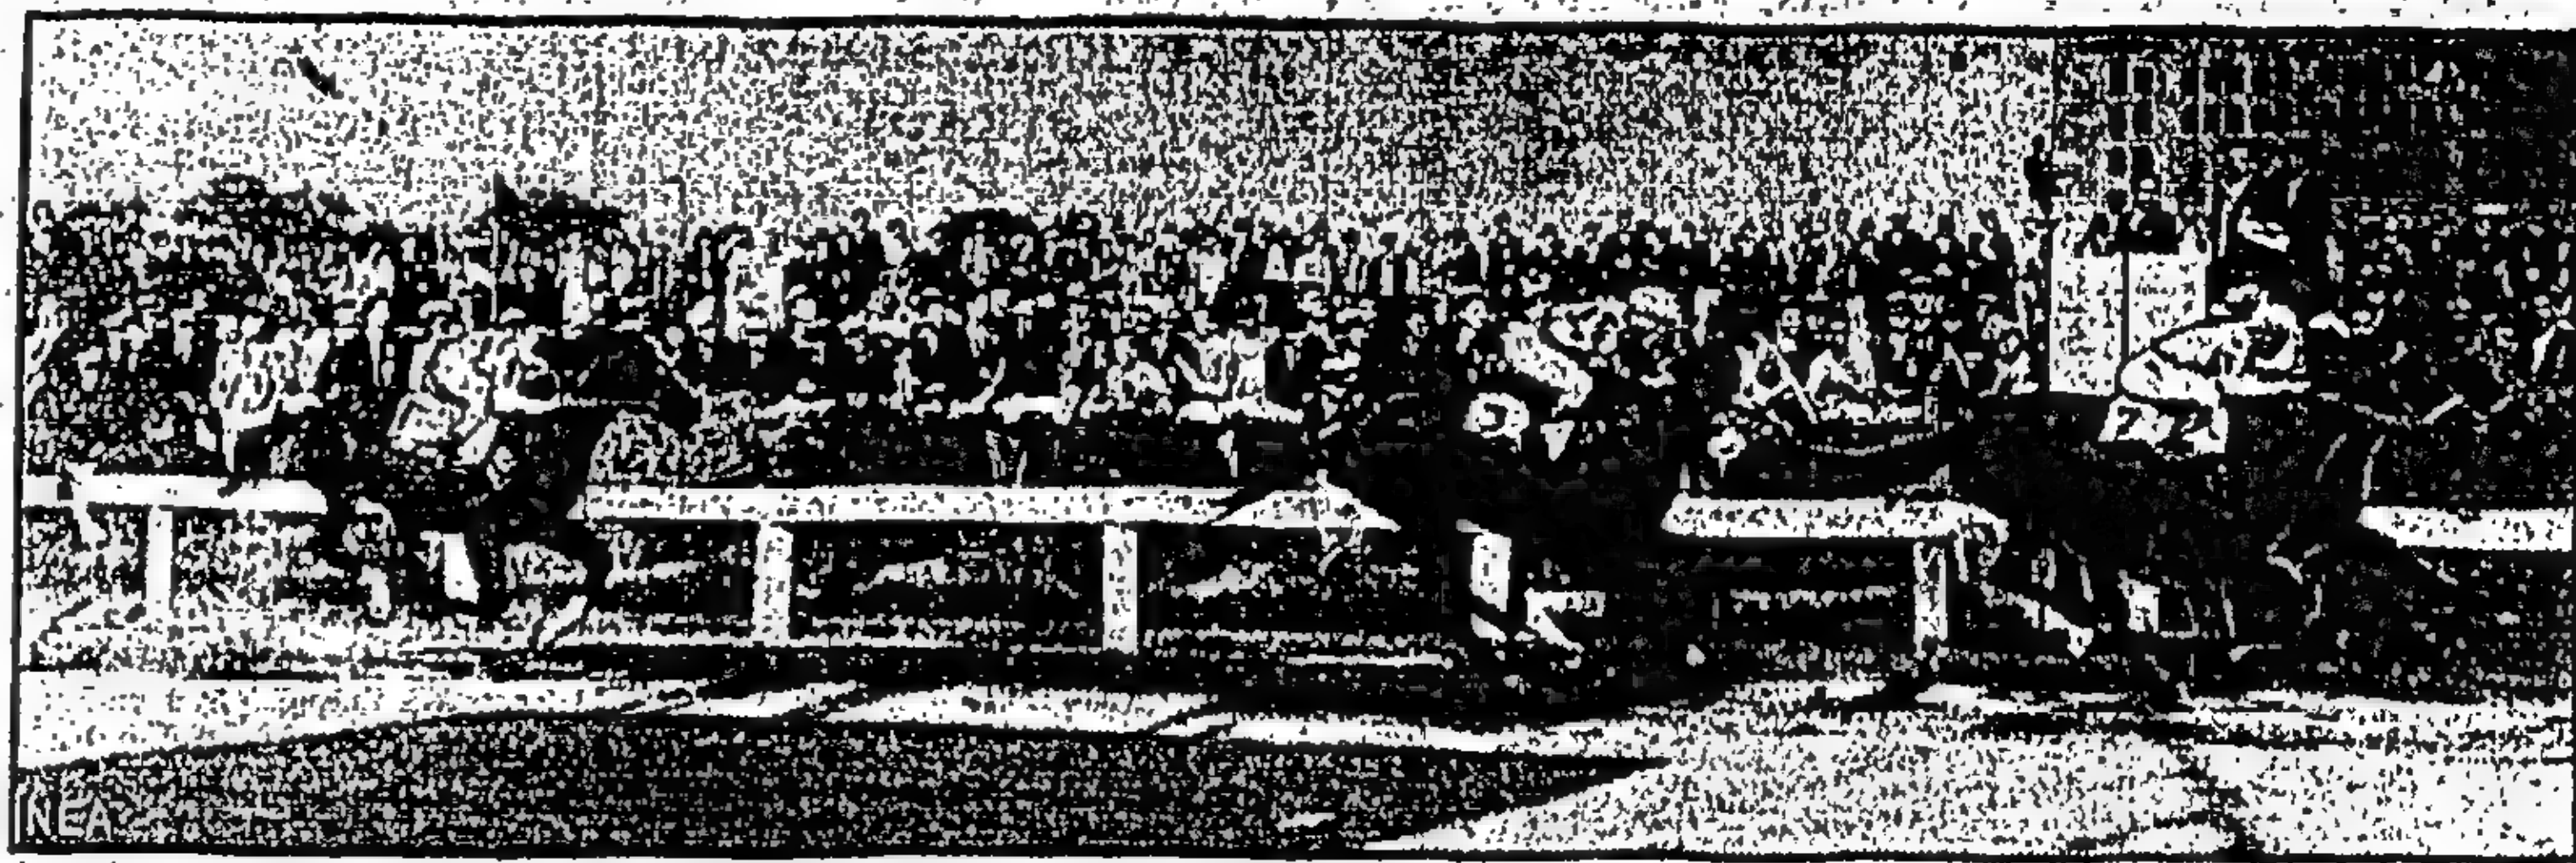

It is not the intention to make the club an exclusive organization, but merely to promote interest in game by providing high-class lockers, modern sanitation, and facilities. The membership is literally open to all and the fees are reasonable, while the courts will be available all day and all through the year.

WELL-KNOWN OFFICIALS.

To ensure that adequate conditions are provided, the club has invited the popular local tennis champion, Mr. Khoo Hooi-hye, to be its executive secretary, while, in the interest of beginners, arrangements are being made to secure the professional assistance of Mr. R. Carnavaro as instructor. Prominent local leaders, including Dr. H. H. Kung, Mr. T. V. Soong, Mayor Wu Te-chen, and Dr. C. T. Wang, have been asked to be patrons of the Club, while all the ranking Chinese and foreign players, as well as others keenly interested in tennis, have been invited to become honorary members.

INTERPORT TRIALS.

The following players have been invited to participate in Interport tennis trials to be held on the S.L.T.A. court at the Cercle Sportif Francais: W. A. H. Duff, Khoo Hooi-hye, Machida, L. D. Carson, M. Benaviteh, V. T. Wang, Guy Cheng, and T. K. (Billy) Yu.

A finish over which 30,000 turf fans cheered themselves hoarse is recorded here as Mrs. Dodge Sloan's High Quest barely nosed out Cavalcade, the Kentucky Derby winner, to win the historic Preakness at Baltimore, Md. Running strong in third place is Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Discovery. In fourth place comes Aganias.

SOVIET'S NEW-FOUND LOVE OF GAMES

Cricket, Rugby, Rowing All Encouraged

London, June 20. Cricket is to be introduced into Soviet Russia this year. Hitherto the game has been played only by Englishmen and a few of their Russian friends. Other British sports that are being encouraged include Rugby football, which was introduced for the first time last year. Several teams are now playing the game. Rugby is preferred to American football, which is considered too rough and does not appeal to the Soviet youth.

Water-polo and rowing are very popular and each city has its clubs as many women as men taking part in the rowing events. American baseball is also played.

NEW DEVELOPMENT.

It is significant of the interest taken in games that a miniature city devoted entirely to sport is being built on the outskirts of Moscow. When finished, it will consist of a stadium containing a football field, a running track, tennis courts, a swimming pool, gymnasiums, library, restaurants and buildings to house the athletes.

F.A.'S £1,363 CUP-TIES PROFITS

SEMI-FINALS COST £14 14s.

£149,535 ASSETS

The Football Association this year spent £14 14s on running the two semi-final Cup-ties. The matches brought in £1,377.

The balance-sheet of the association reveals these profits, and shows that the association finished the last year of its working with accumulated assets of £149,535.

Amateur Cup-ties added £341 to the income.

The final, played on the West Ham United ground, produced £533—and all the F. A. had to do on the expenditure side of the Amateur Cup was £18 18s. The association's share of the £20,000 gate at the F. A. Cup Final between Manchester City and Portsmouth was £5,081, but the amount spent is not disclosed.

£7,831 FROM CUP ROUNDS.

From all the Cup rounds £7,831 was received.

International matches brought in £20,790—the game between England and Scotland at Wembley accounting for £13,384.

Of the nominal capital of 2,000 ls. shares 501 have been issued, but the balance-sheet shows that nothing has been paid up on those shares.

Administration cost £15,960, with expenses attached to the running of the council accounting for the greatest sum—£3,521. Salaries, wages, and auditors' fees amounted to £2,754.

On the international match account, the game at Wembley cost the F. A. £224—less than half the total amount spent on the tour in Italy and Switzerland.

Even that, though it cost £3,716, resulted in a net gain of £3,716.

Among the assets the value of the offices at Lancaster-gate, W., is written down from £15,472 to £14,698 and, after an allowance of £1,084 for office furniture, the great bulk of the remaining balance is invested in Government securities or loans to clubs. The latter item accounts for £14,662.

The F. A. believes in having cash in big sums at call. The current account at the bank is £14,926.

Tottenham Hotspur's New Stand

£40,000 SCHEME IN OPERATION

London. A start has been made on Tottenham Hotspur's £40,000 scheme to make their ground one of the most up-to-date and commodious football grounds in the country.

By the time next season opens on the last Saturday in August there will be accommodation for 75,000 spectators, of whom about 60,000 will be under cover.

Improvements are to be made to the present stand, but the chief work will be the erection of a new double-decker stand on the east side of the pitch, providing additional accommodation for over 18,000 onlookers.

Many years ago Tottenham purchased a row of houses adjoining the east side of their ground, and let them at low rents.

This generously operated against them when they endeavoured to secure possession, as alternative accommodation had to be provided for tenants at rents not in excess of those they had been paying.

The directors were faced with a big dilemma when they decided to obtain possession, but recently the last tenant went out, and the work of demolition is being vigorously carried out.

To enable them to obtain possession of the houses which are being demolished, the club purchased a number of houses to provide accommodation for the tenants displaced, an operation which may mean a serious annual loss to the club. In other cases tenants anxious to purchase a house were given the necessary deposit money.

BLIND GOLFERS IN A MATCH

CHAUFFEUR AS GUIDE

Two men who were blinded during the war are to play in a golf match—Mr. W. H. J. Oxenham and Captain Gerald Lowry, both of whom practise as osteopaths in the West End of London.

They were fellow-students at the College of Osteopathy some years ago.

Mr. Oxenham, who plays golf regularly at West Hove, has a handicap of 22.

The match, according to present arrangements, will be a foursome, each of the sightless men having a professional as partner.

Mr. Oxenham told a reporter: "My partner will, I expect, be MacDonald Smith, and Capt. Lowry will have a well-known London professional.

"My chauffeur, who used to act as my caddy, teed-up for me, gave me the direction of the hole, and handed me the correct club. He left my service recently, but his successor is coming along very nicely."

ly, for the reason that a full explosion shot is more difficult to gauge and control. On most shots out of a bunker, I am not merely attempting to get the ball out but as close to the pin as possible.

"All this, of course, refers to the play out of traps bordering the green. If I am bunkered elsewhere, the position of the ball and the extent of the hazard to clear determine the club I decide to use.

"If it's a low trap, with room for clearance, I do not hesitate to use a long iron or, on occasions, even a spoon. If the risk is great, however, it is always the better part of valour to play primarily to get out of the trap."

SAND BUNKER

ONCE TERRIFYING

NOW HIS PET SHOT

New York, June 19. When he's "hot," there isn't a club in the bag that Gene Sarazen doesn't take out confidently and play with accurate results.

The national professional champion long has been noted among fellow craftsmen as one of the finest long iron players in the game. Never a consistently great putter Gene helped avoid too many headaches on the greens by the artfulness with which he executed mashie niblick shots from the 50- to 100-yard range. His wood shots also are an outstanding feature of his game.

His pet shot, however, is a semi-explosion from a sand trap. Long before the flat-faced "sand wedge" was commercially perfected, under specifications approved by the United States Golf Association, Sarazen replaced the outlawed concave-faced niblick with a heavy bladed, straight-faced club of his own manufacture.

He worked on it for hours in the shop, meanwhile experimenting daily in the sand, and finally produced a weapon that gave consistently remarkable results. He developed astounding accuracy to a point where spectators generally hesitated to wager even money that Gene would not get the ball close enough to the hole, from any designed bunker, to get down with a single putt!

"Trap shots that used to give me a fit became easy and I attribute a number of my tournament victories to the fact I frequently was able to recover from the sand without losing a stroke," says Sarazen. "It is true that failure to get out of two bunkers cost me the 1933 British open title but that was no fault of the club or my ability to use it. I simply happened to get unplayable lies twice."

"But the year before I came out of a bunker on the home hole at Fresh Meadow with only a short putt which I got down, to clinch the open championship of the United States.

"The extra weight in the sand wedge helps to give better control. I play the shot off the right foot, shorten the swing and hit slightly behind the ball. I do not attempt to dig into the sand heavily."

Men who called her a pest... now fought for her favors!

Yesterday a prim, shy school teacher! Today an untamed beauty, free and graceful as the animal whose skins she wore! Transformed overnight by the jungle ladies and gentlemen male and female!

CASE AGAINST TUNG WAH

HOUSE OCCUPATION INFRINGEMENT

Five summonses against the Chairman of the Tung Wah Hospital Committee for permitting human habitation at Nos. 30, 34, 40, 44 and 46 New Street, ground floors, were heard by Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Mr. P. H. Sin, appearing for the defendant, said that he was instructed to plead guilty, although, strictly speaking, the summonses should have been issued against the Hospital itself as a corporate body, and not against the defendant. He was, however, instructed not to take any objection to that.

The position was, said Mr. Sin, that these five houses in New Street were let to various tenants, with instructions that no more than two people were allowed to stay in each of them. Apparently without his clients' knowledge, more than two people had stayed in the premises. Since the issue of the summonses, two tenants had vacated from Nos. 34 and 44, and he was instructed to say that steps would be taken to abate the nuisance by the other tenants.

Sanitary Inspector Braley said the nuisance had been going on since 1931. It was stated at that time that the nuisance would be abated, but it was not. These houses were all right for work-shops, but not for domestic purposes. The Board allowed two watchmen to stay in the premises.

Mr. Hamilton remarked that summonses in future should be taken out against the Hospital and not the Chairman, and addressing Mr. Sin, said that his client had got to keep the places locked up.

Mr. Sin replied that it would affect the revenue of that great charitable institution, the Tung Wah Hospital, if that should be done.

Mr. Hamilton cautioned defendant on all five counts.

THE PHILIPPINES
COMMONWEALTH

Philippine independence will be brought a step nearer by the big conference which is to be held next week in Manila for the purpose of drawing up a Constitution which is to be established pending complete self-government. Altogether, over 200 delegates will take part in the gathering, but much of the work in drafting the Constitution for their Commonwealth Government has already been done in advance for them. By mandatory legislation, enacted by the United States Congress and accepted by the Philippines Legislature, many of the features of the transition Government, which it is intended shall last for ten years, have already been decided upon. The delegates may argue about the form and degree, but the general substance was decided for them in Washington when the Tydings-McDuffie Act was adopted. Pending eventual withdrawal of United States sovereignty over the archipelago, the Constitution has to contain certain specific provisions, amongst which may be mentioned an obligation of allegiance to the United States, whose supreme authority must be recognised; exemption of United States and church property from taxation; provisions for religious tolerance; recognition of the provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie Act in trade relations between the Philippines and the United States; maintenance of existing limitations on the contraction of public debt; approval by the President of the United States of acts affecting currency, coinage, imports and exports, and immigration; and the conceding of United States control over foreign affairs. Further obligations worthy of note are that the United States preserves the right to maintain military and other reservations and armed forces in the islands, as well as to call into service all armed forces organised by the Philippines Government. What is more, the United States may intervene for the protection of life or for the maintenance of the Government and its obligations. Two other important restrictions, reflecting unadulterated American doctrines, are the requirement that the Constitution must be Republican in form, and that it must contain a bill of rights. It will thus be seen that although the United States is doing its part in fulfilment of the pledge of eventual independence, every care is being exercised that during the transition period there shall be no lapsing of American control of the situation—a wise and very necessary precaution at a moment when affairs in the Pacific are far from being composed.

NOTES OF THE DAY

MODERN SOCIETY

The fact that modern civilization has two faces, one of which has been modelled with infinitely more attention and skill than the other, comes very close to being the basic point of all the world's present troubles. These two faces are the material realm of science, invention, and technical progress, on the one side, and the social realm of human relations, emotions, and mass thinking, on the other. The former is far advanced; the latter is a constant reminder that we are relatively only a few generations out of barbarism. If the history of the human race, covering approximately a million years, is translated into the terms of a man's lifetime, how long has the race been civilised? In terms of personal adjustment rather than race adjustment it is as if civilization had begun only 19 days ago, as if cumulative science went back only to midnight, and the habit of deliberate invention only to this morning.

COMPLEX TOOLS

In other words, the world has been out of the wilderness only a very short time, and acquisition of those complex tools by which modern society is maintained dates back only an hour or so. That being the case, it is small wonder that we have not yet discovered how to extract the utmost in human values from the machines which our ingenuity has devised. We have done marvellously well at the job of inventing things, but we have made practically no progress at the job of learning how to use them properly. That is why we have starvation in the midst of plenty; we suffer because we have too much of everything, and not because we have too little. The task to-day is the education of society up to the level of our scientists and our technicians. Until this is done, their achievements will do the world as much harm as good.

TYPE'S PRANK

The typographical error is one of those perverse and impish pranks of fate which afflict all newspapers in all countries alike. Every editor has suffered from it; the latest is a German editor in Essen, whose paper published a telegram of birthday greetings sent to Hitler by President Hindenburg. The president closed his telegram with an expression not unlike the English "Hear, hear!" And some luckless printer inserted a question mark instead of an exclamation point after it, which so changed the sense of it in German that it became a cynical, "Oh, Yeah?" as a result, the printer went to gaol, and the editor suffered vast mental stress. But anyone who has ever worked on the production of the printed word will sympathise with both. The typographical error will happen, no matter how much care is taken; and it has a fiendish way of happening at the worst times and places. It is just one of those things that put gray hairs on the heads of men who work in newspaper offices.

WHEN THE LAW SPEAKS

The language of the law can be a delight to the layman—when it isn't a pain in the neck. In Italy a farmer allowed a pig to stray into the road. A motorist swerved to when the pig refused to move, and damaged his car. He sued the farmer for damages, holding the farmer responsible for the pig's acts. The case finally reached the supreme court, which rendered its decision as follows: "Where the comportment of an animal, without going into the hypotheses of fault or force majeure, acts in motion elements which otherwise would have remained inert, and these elements in turn, through no fault of their own, but due to the animal's comportment, cause damage to be done, the causal connection between the comportment of the animal, for which the law holds the proprietor to be responsible, and the occurrence causing the damage, appears to be uninterrupted." In other words—the owner of the pig was responsible, and had to pay.

DEATH OF "NEW DIPLOMACY"

By G. A. MARTELLI

ONE OF THE striking aspects of the international situation is the revival of traditional forms of diplomacy. The fondness shown by post-war statesmen for holding world conferences, exchanging visits, and sending each other open letters has become increasingly unpopular. The failure of the Disarmament Conference is likely finally to discredit it. It is doubtful if disarmament was ever possible, but the democratic, not to say democratic, methods used in negotiating it have obviously made its chances infinitely smaller.

The death of disarmament would therefore mark the end of an era, the era of the so-called "new diplomacy." After the discomfiture of the amateurs, professionalism is entering into its own again.

That democracy should dislike and distrust diplomacy and try to usurp its functions, as it has been doing for the last fifteen years, is only natural. The one is competent, well-informed, precise, and economical in words; the other, ignorant, vague, garrulous, and incapable. Democracy loves slogans, formulas, appeals to sentiment, all of which diplomacy is justly suspicious. Democracy would like to spend its time alternately taking off its hat to its neighbours and challenging them to duels. Diplomacy is equally opposed to either of these attitudes. Democracy loves the magnesium flare, the little talk on the news reel; diplomacy shuns them. Democracy... but why go on? The incompatibility of mass rule (and mass emotion) with a wise foreign policy is sufficiently demonstrated by the history of Europe since the War.

It is the history of an attempt to apply democratic ideals and democratic methods to that essentially undemocratic society, the Comity of Nations. There was about as much chance of this succeeding as would be an attempt to impose, say, modern hygiene on a primitive people, or Mormonism on a prohibition on England. Quite apart from the questionable ideal of an international democracy, the method employed for establishing it could only be fatal. The secret of democracy, as we all know, is the secret of appealing to the greatest number. If this principle is liable to be dangerous in domestic politics, its effects in the international sphere are even more unfortunate. They can be observed at any gathering in Geneva.

To post-war statesmen—in-tormented with such phrases as "Self-Determination," "Equality of Rights," "World Co-operation," &c., the League of Nations provided an ideal platform, bigger and better and more resonant than any Parliamentary tribune. Here in front of an audience avid of oratory, and of a host of reporters waiting to flash their eloquence round the earth, the world's leaders could talk to their hearts' content. There has never been such a marvellous debating house—so spectacular, so well-equipped, with such brilliant performers in every language.

The trouble is that in public debate people speak not only to convince but also for effect. They may be thinking, perhaps, of a personal triumph or of the need to flatter or appease some section of public opinion. A delegate at Geneva, knowing his speech is being reported, might be concerned more with the reaction in his own country, even his own constituency, than with that of the other delegates with whom he is ostensibly conducting business. The matter in hand would in that case take second place.

This sort of thing has, in fact, happened again and again, and still more time would have been wasted by it had not the world's representatives tacitly agreed among themselves long ago that all public declarations were intended primarily for internal consumption, and could, therefore, be largely disregarded. But is it to be wondered at that with such a system nothing has ever been done?

The fact of the matter is that delicate diplomatic negotiations (and all important negotiations are delicate) cannot be conducted in the glare of world publicity, when every "give" is liable to be denounced as a national betrayal and every "take" may be exploited by an unscrupulous opposition; when each move is jealously watched by a press ready to pounce on the least hitch and magnify it into a rupture, or (worse) prematurely acclaim accord where there is none.

The danger of this "box-office draw" diplomacy is that it pits the parties against each other instead of drawing them together. Each negotiation becomes a sporting contest—though sometimes not so sporting—in which the points are scored by the Cabinet Ministers put up as champions are minutely recorded by the spectators in their respective countries. Considerations of prestige thus become paramount. It is like trying to settle that matter of the broken fence with your wife and children and servants and the neighbours, and all the other people in the village looking on and cheering. Amicable arrangements are never arrived at in this way.

Fortunately, the most calamitous consequences of the recent international "dog-fights" have been averted by the professional diplomats. While the would-be arbiters and pacifists and liquidators have strutted across the stage of Europe's warring places, the much-abused waterlilies have been patiently vigilant in the wings; prompting here, advising there, offering now a timely warning, now a tactful correction; they have done their best to parry the effects of amateurism. Their really was the ultimate responsibility. For while politicians come and go, and policies change colour with parties, the national interest remains the same, and it is the business of the diplomats and other permanent officials to preserve continuity in its pursuit.

One of the charges brought against the old diplomacy by the new, and by which the latter seeks to justify itself, is that it works in secret and commits nations to policies which they would not approve of were they given the

The Very Idea!
THE COCKROACH
HORROR

By George
"THE GOLDEN CANDAREEN"
(Eleventh Instalment)

JEEJEEBHOY gave a cry of horror!

He had seen a cockroach emerge from the neck of the whisky bottle and the horrible insect was now reeling towards the place where Madge and he were still clasped in each other's arms.

Jeejeebhoys' father had once been bitten by a cockroach at Reg, being the only son, had inherited a loathing for the creature which amounted almost to a positive dislike.

Drawing up his knee sharply Jeejeebhoys forced Madge to free him and then hurriedly wrapping his shoes round his feet he vaulted the verandah and disappeared into the blackness of the night.

With a curse, Madge darted to the verandah.

What had happened to mar this meeting to which she had looked forward so much? Why had he given such a dreadful cry? Madge looked in the mirror and found the answer, for the cockroach was now almost within biting distance.

So it was this which had come between her and her boy friend. Madge waited till the little beast climbed on to the table and then flicked it viciously with her finger into the jungle.

With a scream of anger the amah dashed from her cubicle and flung herself at Madge's feet.

Dear readers, this is the last but one instalment of our inspired serial and it is rapidly bringing us to the point where we started off. Now problems are raised to-day, the most vexed question being, why did the amah fling herself at Madge's feet? We admit it seems an unlikely thing to do but perhaps Madge has scented the amah's copy of Chaucer's early English poems in her boots. Or perhaps she has discovered that Madge has borrowed her boots to make a good showing in front of Jeejeebhoys. Whatever the reason we can rely on Madge keeping her head, though the appendage does not seem to have benefited anyone materially so far in our soul-stabbing serial. In the meantime, what has happened to Jeejeebhoys? Will he meet the cockroach in the silent watches of the forest and if so, will he discover that it is the common blattid prithiporous and not the Chachalaca as he had feared? Whatever fate may decide in this respect we fear that our readers have seen the last of that glamorous character, for tomorrow will find him typing out correspondence at his little desk at the P.W.D. unconscious that the recital of his deeds of prowess have won him the admiration of a host of fans.

LESSON IN JOURNALISM.

The Film Critic

Being a film critic is not such a good job as it was.

In the old days a critic could give a bum show a great write up and save himself a lot of trouble but now that the public has been educated up to art, they've got temperamental over what they read.

The worst part of a film critic's life is explaining to the other reporters why he has got no spare complimentary tickets. These are the few occasions he gets a free criticism of himself.

The essential feature of being a film critic is being able to sit still and smoke calmly through the most galling scenes long hours at a stretch and then to go back to the sordid surroundings of the office and reduce Mao West to a couple of adjectives, carve Grata Garbo into a cohesive sentence and make Marlene Dietrich appear like a goddess in pants jammed between an advertisement for castor oil and a motoring column.

At Home the film critic's main standby is caviare and cigars but he loses this diet when he comes to the Far East and early adapts himself to frozen beer, ice cream, and Camel cigarettes.

REMARKABLE EVIDENCE IN THE MARCEL BUFFET CASE

Mr. Lanepart Wears Long Trousers at Request of Court

MR. ADAMSON'S VERSION

BUSINESS WOULD HAVE BEEN A REGULAR GOLD MINE

"GILDING THE LILY"

A total denial of the allegations regarding his drunkenness and business misconduct was given by Frank Adamson at today's continued hearing before the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, of the claim for wrongful dismissal.

Defendant is Nathan Blumenthal, proprietor of the Marcel Cafe, Nathan Road. He admits that he engaged Adamson on agreement to manage the Marcel Buffet for a year but pleads that he was justified in dismissing him in October last year after four months service.

Plaintiff claims 40 per cent. of estimated profits over a year, amounting to $6,488, and free meals for his wife and himself over the same period, estimated at $1,004.

There is a counter-claim for $688.12 money lent to Adamson, and another amount unassessed of money due from Adamson.

Mr. H. C. Macnamara, instructed by Mr. R. H. Cole, of Hall, Brutton and Co., appeared for defendant and Mr. Leo D'Almada, junr., instructed by Mr. M. A. da Silva, of Remedios and Silva, represented plaintiff.

AN EXPLANATION.

Mr. D'Almada said he would like to recall Mr. Nathan Blumenthal later, as his friend, Mr. Macnamara, had no objection. He would also remark about dropping the claim for general damages that this had been done because it was his opinion that the claim was not maintainable in law, and not for any other reason. Plaintiff was then called to give evidence. He said he was working on a commission basis selling beer, cement and other materials for the M. B. K. He had been doing since November and often his sales scarcely paid for his apartment rent and food.

Mr. D'Almada:—How did you meet Mr. Blumenthal?

Witness:—He came to my wife and myself when we were eating at the Cafe and broached the matter of the Buffet and said he was not doing very well with the place.

OFFER REVISED.

What else did he say?—He offered me half the place for $1,500 and then found that he could not do this because of the licence, so he offered me 40 per cent. of the profits and free meals to manage the Buffet.

What were his reasons?—He was after the American mercantile trade which he was not getting. He made an agreement with you?—Yes.

Was there ever a suggestion of any other secret agreement between you?—No.

FREE HAND.

Did you understand that you would have a free hand apart from certain restrictions as manager?—I was told by Mr. Blumenthal to go ahead and do what I like to get business.

What was the business like when you joined?—They were apparently doing nothing. Since you joined what was the business like?—It became popular about a month afterwards and remained so until I was dismissed.

You were well acquainted with the licensing laws?—Yes. The type of customers you attracted to the Buffet was sometimes inclined to be difficult?—Yes.

FREE DRINKS.

And it was the kind of customer who would like on occasion to fraternise with the manager?—Well, I had a lot of friends among them.

And sometimes you would give a free drink on the house as allowed in your agreement?—Yes. And get drinks for yourself and friends at cost, price up to the value of $50 a month?—Yes.

I think it would be incorrect to say that you hate drink?—Yes. I could not say that. How many drinks would you have in a day?—I might have four or five, six or seven, or none at all.

You sold your liquor well?—Yes, I think so.

Was there any cause for complaint by Mr. Blumenthal or his sons until his return from Japan?—There were complaints but no reason for them. Not from David but Leon Blumenthal, the incident giving rise to them being the transfer of the money to the Marcel Cafe.

MORE DENIALS.

Did you have trouble about two small boys?—Never.

You have heard the reasons Mr. Blumenthal has given for dismissing you?—Yes. I deny them all.

Witness went on to say that he was not habitually drunk and in fact was never drunk; never used bad language in the cafe, but rather tried to suppress it; was not familiar with the servants, but gave them a drink when they gave his wife a birthday present; did not fall in accounting for the takings, because that was the cashier's job, and did not assault Mr. Richter, manager of the Marcel Cafe.

The last incident, he said, arose out of an altercation between Richter and his friend Greenway, in which witness acted as mediator.

Knowing that Mr. Blumenthal would like "to have something on me," witness said he reported the matter to the Water Police Station but found that the Blumenthals were before him and had said that the manager had been assaulted by two big bullies and had his shirt torn from his back.

Mr. D'Almada:—Did you drop your general claim for damages on legal advice?—Yes.

Is it because you feel the injury to your reputation is not worth $9,000?—No, that has nothing to do with it.

Is it because you were chary of being cross-examined on that point?—No.

PROFIT ESTIMATES.

Cross-examined by Mr. Macnamara, witness was asked:—Your estimate of profit would mean that you would have to make $2,000 a month profit?—No, a little less. I expected to increase the business by $150 a day gross.

Witness added that it would have been a regular gold mine. Do you know that the Buffet was closed up in April?—Yes. Shut up because one shop was taking money from the other.

Your original claim was for damages for loss of credit and reputation?—Yes, after being kicked out and accused of being drunk.

This is not the first time you have made a claim in the courts of Hongkong for damages?—No.

Mr. D'Almada objected that this matter did not enter into the case. The Chief Justice ruled that the question was permissible as the whole of defendant's case was that plaintiff was unsuitable for the business, and the question of reputation was material.

Mr. D'Almada:—Mr. Blumenthal was aware of this case before he engaged the plaintiff.

PREVIOUS CASE.

Mr. Macnamara:—You brought a claim against Mr. Newman of the Gloucester Building for libel and slander for $1,000 and demanded an apology. I put that the apology was refused and you were given $1 damages?—Yes. I only wanted nominal damages.

Mr. Justice Lindsell said then that the case should never have been brought to Court, and I say now that this case is grossly exaggerated?—I don't think so.

Mr. Blumenthal was interposed at this point.

Mr. D'Almada:—Mr. Lanepart tells me that some days after you got rid of Mr. Adamson, he, Mr. Lanepart, said to you, "Why did you sack Adamson; he was not drunk." You answered, "We don't need him; we can do without him." Is that true?

Witness:—No.

If Adamson had not been continually drunk, as you say, would you have fired him?—No. If he shuts up in time and looks after the cash he is a good man.

MR. LANEPART CALLED.

Mr. Lanepart, who appeared in long trousers in deference to wishes of the Court, was the next witness. He had his volubility checked several times by both counsel.

He stated that he was formerly given free meals and a salary to look after the books of the Marcel Cafe. Speaking of the Buffet business, witness said: "As soon as Mr. Adamson came, matters got better and better until he was dismissed, much to the disapproval of the staff."

Sir Robert Clive, Britain's new Ambassador in Tokyo and Lady Clive, who have just arrived in the Japanese capital.

Mr. D'Almada:—Did you ever find Mr. Adamson drunk or misbehaving himself in the business?—Never. In my opinion he did his work well. They could not find a better man to do it. The business has dropped since.

Witness said when Mr. Blumenthal was on holiday Adamson said he wanted the Buffet books kept well, so witness took them over. When Adamson was sacked he told Mr. Blumenthal it was a mistake and that he was not drunk. Mr. Blumenthal replied: "We don't need him. We can do without him."

THE WHOLE TROUBLE.

Continuing, witness said:—"I went with Mr. Blumenthal to see Mr. George K. Hall Brutton and he started to tell a long story of what had happened and I could not help it. I burst out instinctively and said 'The whole trouble is that Mr. Blumenthal wants everything for himself.'"

Were your services dispensed with afterwards?—When we got back, Mr. Blumenthal spoke to me very angrily. He said: "How dare you speak of me like that? You are my employee and must speak for me. I will give it back to you sometime." I asked him if I was dismissed and he said "No," but after I had presented a statement of accounts he dismissed me.

Mr. Macnamara:—You seem to be an admirer of Mr. Adamson?—I prepared his daily sales and know he did good business.

Did you later amend the statement of accounts? Sort of "gilding the lily"?—This is the statement I prepared for Mr. Adamson, a private account.

Very private and very much for Mr. Adamson I should say?—Both accounts are correct as far as basic accounts. They differ in legal points.

In other words, after you were dismissed you trotted off to Mr. Adamson and concocted this account?—I am free to work for anyone.

"IN CAUSE OF PEACE."

Are you free after acquiring this knowledge from Mr. Blumenthal to concoct this account?—I was employed by both gentlemen.

Mr. Adamson asked me to represent his point of view in the accounts. There can be no objection to that.

Mr. Blumenthal has many objections?—I was working in the cause of peace.

It doesn't seem that your efforts have been very successful?—No, to my great regret, Mr. Adamson was dismissed, much against my advice.

You enforced that view by going over to help his opponent?—I had helped both of them.

In re-examination, his lordship agreed with Mr. D'Almada that there was no suggestion of concoction about the accounts.

"JEALOUS MAN STUFF."

Mrs. Adamson was called and asked whether it was true as Leon Blumenthal had said that her husband objected to her drinking with some sailors in the Buffet and that a scene was only prevented by Blumenthal apologising to the sailors.

Witness:—It is definitely a lie. Witness also denied that she had helped husband into a ricksha because he was drunk.

In reply to Mr. Macnamara, she said the cause of the trouble in the Buffet was Leon Blumenthal who "played the jealous man stuff." He was continually wanting to start flights with customers.

TOLD WHAT TO SAY.

Following evidence by Guelati, one of the cashiers employed at the Buffet, Chan Fan took the stand.

In the course of his evidence, he said:—"One day Mr. Blumenthal called me into a small room and said he was calling me as a witness. He said to me 'You must say he (Adamson) was drunk.'"

He also told me I was to go into Court and tell the Court that it was my own knowledge that Adamson had given the former cashier $10 a month out of his own pocket in order that he would not record in his books an order for food Adamson had obtained from the Cafe, and also that any goods for which Adamson had signed, say if it was $10, he was to put down $5. Furthermore Mr. Blumenthal told me to tell the Court that Adamson had also offered to pay me $10 to treat him in the same way as the other cashier.

His Lordship:—Was there any truth in it?

Witness:—It is not true. Witness, continuing, said:—"I told Mr. Blumenthal that I could not do that because I knew of my own knowledge that Mr. Adamson paid fully for all he signed for. I said I would look into the matter and Mr. Blumenthal then said 'That's all right for the time being, but come up to my room sometime and bring a pencil and paper so that you can write it down and remember, to say it in Court.' I did not go up."

Mr. D'Almada:—When you left on September 14 was there any mention of your being a witness?

Witness:—I asked him for two months' wages because he had dismissed me. He said he would only give me 15 days wages and said 'If you want to be a witness for Mr. Adamson you had better look to him for your two months' salary.' Mr. Blumenthal then told Richter to go upstairs and make out an agreement for me to sign stating that I would not go as a witness for Mr. Adamson. I refused to sign such an agreement and he only paid me for 14 days.

In answer to cross-examination, witness stated he was dismissed because on the night of September 14 his cash was $1 more than the amount on the cash register.

The hearing was adjourned until this afternoon.

CORRESPONDENCE

Rabies Scare

To the Editor,

Hongkong Telegraph.

Sir,—The only power, so far as I can find, of the Police in the New Territories to deal with rabies is contained in the following regulation, which is interesting in view of your announcement that 200 dogs were shot in the New Territories, presumably by the Police:

"Any dog which appears to be suffering from rabies or mange, and which does not appear to be at the time under the control of any person, may be captured and detained, or may be shot or otherwise destroyed, by any police officer or any person authorized by the Captain Superintendent of Police."

It seems hardly likely that the 200 dogs shot were rabid dogs and therefore the remainder presumably were many. I don't think manginess is a symptom of rabies or of contact with rabies.

The deduction to be drawn from the above facts is that either the police have been shooting without any lawful authority (which ought to be impossible even in Hongkong) or the 200 dogs were rabid, or the shooting in part had no relation to Rabies, and the information is therefore misleading as inducing the Public to think the police are taking anti-rabies measure in shooting 200 dogs.

It may be the dogs in question were contacts and were destroyed on the orders of the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon, who has the following powers:—

"If the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon is of opinion that any dog is or may be suffering from rabies, or that any dog has been or may reasonably be suspected of having been in contact with any case of rabies or suspected rabies, it may be destroyed by him or by any person by his orders."

Might I suggest that the powers that be study the existing regulations? If there is any real danger from rabies and if there is any means of reducing that danger, let Government order that the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon and the Local Officers consult together and devise some means which is lawful, enforceable and holds some prospect of success.

If it is not possible to devise effective measures let the police be called off. I know nothing of preventive medicine but I should say it is a very highly technical subject, requiring skill which the police cannot be expected to possess.

In any case the present regulations are worse than useless as neither the police nor the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon have the powers which are obviously necessary for dealing with an actual outbreak to say nothing of taking effective preventive steps.

My object in writing this letter is to induce Government to take proper steps to control the situation, and to show how the police are placed in an impossible position by trying to deal with a situation which should be in the hands of the Colonial Veterinary Surgeon and both are without proper powers.

DOGS ON THE BEACH

FINES IMPOSED ON TWO OWNERS

SWIMMING MINUS MUZZLE

"On beaches they are a nuisance, whatever age they are; they can still carry rabies," remarked Mr. Macfadyen, in the Central Police Court this morning, when he imposed a fine of $8 on Sergeant W. T. Cubitt, R.A.S.C., of No. 2 "B" Block, Kennedy Road, for allowing his dog abroad unmuzzled and unleashed on Big Wave Bay Beach.

Defendant:—I plead guilty, but I would like to say, sir, that my dog is only a spaniel puppy and is not more than six months old. It was only unmuzzled for ten minutes. The child was playing with it.

Answering a similar summons in respect of Repulse Bay Beach, Franz Tolle, of No. 1 Felix Villas, stated the dog was in the water without a muzzle, but as soon as it went on to the beach he put on the muzzle.

The Magistrate:—Was the dog running about the beach?

Sergeant Brown:—I saw it just coming out of the water. A dog is just as liable to bite in the water without a muzzle.

His Worship remarked that a dog would not always follow its master on coming out of the water. It might run about on the beach, which was rather dangerous.

In the present case, however, under the circumstances, he would impose a fine of $5.

Private B. Wyatt, R.A.O.C., of No. 74 Jaffee Road, was fined $8 for allowing his dog abroad in Stone Nullah Lane unmuzzled and unleashed.

"On this occasion the dog seized the chance of an open door. Normally he is muzzled," stated the defendant.

FACTORY LAW INFRINGED

WOMEN WORKING AT NIGHT

"You had better be careful; you'll lose the full value of your order the next time," warned Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning when the manager of the "Koon Wah" Knitting Factory was summoned for allowing women to work on the premises during prohibited hours.

Inspector Phillips, of the S.C.A., told his Worship that he visited defendant's factory at 10.50 p.m. on June 15 and found eight women working. Actually, the factory was a big one, occupying three floors and using a large quantity of machinery.

Defendant stated that he had just received an order and he was attempting to fulfil it.

His Worship:—Was it a big order?

Defendant:—No. It was only a small one, but it was from a regular customer, whom I was trying to oblige.

A fine of $25 was imposed.

NO LICENCE FOR RADIO SETS

JAPANESE FINED $50 TO-DAY

Mrs. K. Iida, residing at No. 58 Johnston Road, ground floor, summoned before Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, for dealing in radio sets without a licence, and alternatively without possession of a radio set without any licence, was fined $50 on the first count, and cautioned on the second.

E. Quintan, residing at No. 4 Yik Kwan Avenue, first floor, was fined $10 for possession of a radio receiving set without a licence.

CONTROL OF RUBBER

NEW SYSTEM IN DUTCH INDIES

NATIVE PROBLEM OVERSTRESSED

The Hague, June 26. It is reliably reported that the Dutch East Indies Government is replacing the export duty on native rubber as soon as possible by a system of individual licences.

Meanwhile, the latest available information shows that the potential capacity of the native production is considerably lower than was previously estimated.

A communique issued by the second meeting of the International Rubber Regulation Committee states that the Committee welcomed Sir George Beharrell (Britain) and Herr Otto Friedrich (Germany) as members of the Advisory Panel of Manufacturers.

Matters relating to the organization and the preparation of statistics were considered, and also reports from the various delegations on the measures taken to implement the obligations of their territories under the international agreement.

The Committee is very satisfied with the progress made in the latter direction, which has been very well advanced. The next meeting of the Committee will be held on July 31.—Reuter.

TWO REVOLVERS SEIZED

EX-SEAMAN SENT TO GAOL

Two revolvers and five rounds of ammunition were discovered by Detective-Sergeant Fowle and a police party when they raided the third floor of No. 10 Wo Fung Street yesterday afternoon. A Chinese was taken into custody.

The man, who gave his name as Wu Shu-shan, alias Wu Cheung-yau, alias Wu Tin, 25, unemployed, was charged before Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court this morning when he pleaded guilty to a charge of possession without a licence from the Inspector General of Police.

Mr. T. Murphy, Assistant Director of Criminal Intelligence (Crime) said:—"One of the revolvers is, at the moment, unserviceable. The trigger is out of order. The other one is in perfect working order and the five chambers of ammunition, the subject of a charge, fits this revolver. I ask your Worship to take a serious view of the case as it is believed the revolvers were intended to commit a crime in the Colony."

"I used to be a seafarer to Annam, but I am unemployed at present," said the defendant.

One year's hard labour was imposed, and the revolvers and ammunition were confiscated.

The Hongkong dollar advanced 1/8th this morning to 1s. 5 3/8d., due to the strength of silver.

The market locally is quite steady, with inter-bank business reported at 1s. 6 1/2d.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

Too many people rely on a "finesse" to make their hand for them. Take for example to-day's hand—many players will look at it and say, "Well, if the spade finesse works, I can make six odd."

But suppose the spade finesse does not work? Don't wait until the hand is over to say that. As soon as the dummy goes down, it is best for you to go still further and say, "If it falls, can I still make my contract?"

To-day's hand is not a difficult play, but one in which all you have to do is to eliminate two suits from your hand and dummy's so that, when your finesse does fall, your opponent will have to help you with the hand.

The Bidding

East's overcall of three diamonds is rather dangerous. When South bids three hearts, he informs his partner that he cannot take care of the losing diamonds.

It looks to South, when his partner goes to four hearts, that

♠ 8 6 4 3	♥ 10 7 2	♦ A 2	♣ 10
♠ K J 7 2	♥ 9 6	♦ 9 8 6	♣ J 10 9 6

3♥	Pass	4♥	Pass
5♥	Pass	6♥	Pass

North must have control of the diamond suit, and if this is true, there is a chance for a slam.

So South makes the slam try with a bid of five hearts. North, holding the ace of diamonds and the queen of clubs, is justified in going to six, as he holds the ace of his partner's suit.

The Play

West's opening lead was the nine of diamonds—the top of his partner's suit—which the declarer won in dummy with the ace. South immediately led two rounds of hearts, which picked up the outstanding trump. Now a small club was won in dummy with the queen, a club returned and won with the king.

The losing diamond then was discarded from dummy on the ace of clubs. South led the five of diamonds and trumped in dummy with the ten of hearts.

The nine of spades was led.

Today's Contract Problem

Bid the following hand, South to arrive at a part score in clubs. West opens a heart. Declarer to make four clubs.

♠ 10 8 5 2	♥ 10 7 2	♦ A 10 8 5 2	♣ K 9 4

PACE TOO HOT FOR THE GOLF VETERANS

BRITISH OPEN QUALIFIERS LOWEST LIMIT ON RECORD

BERT GADD LEADS

London, June 26.
The pace set in the qualifying rounds of the British Open Golf Championship to-day was too hot for the majority of Britain's most famous veterans of the course.

At least six former holders of the title, including George Duncan, James Braid, E. Ray, Arthur Havers, Herd and White, were among the eliminated.

Players were scores of 152 or better alone qualified for the final stage. This in itself is indicative of the standard of golf put up, which was little short of magnificent. The qualifying point of 152 is the lowest in the long history of the championship.

BRILLIANT PLAY.

Bert Gadd, of Brandhall, Birmingham, led the field at the close of the day. He was brilliantly consistent throughout, returning a card of 70 for the Royal Cinque Ports course at Deal and a card of 69 for the St. George's course at Sandwich.

Henry Cotton who broke the Cinque Ports record with a round of 60 had a bad time at Deal, but occupied equal second place with Percy Alliss and James Adams (Ireland) both of whom set up new records for the Deal course, with cards of 67.

The American challengers all qualified, but not one of them was at all convincing.

PROMINENT AMATEURS.

The best amateur performance was put up by E. F. Storey, the former Cambridge captain, who was equal third at the end of the day.

Robert Sweeney played exceedingly good golf at Deal, and with an aggregate of 69, broke the amateur record for the course. James Wallace, the Scottish artisan golfer, who reached the final of the British amateur open, only to be overwhelmed by the most amazing display of golf in the history of the game, by Lawson Little, could not deal with the open championship courses and failed to qualify with a total of 169, eight over the limit.

SOME OF THE SCORES.

The four leading returns were:
Bert Gadd 70+69=139
H. Cotton 66+75=141
P. Alliss 74+67=141
J. Adams 74+67=141

Other scores were:
E. F. Storey 70+73=143
R. Sweeney 76+69=145
MacDonald Smith 75+73=148
D. Shute (holder) 76+73=149
G. Sarazen 75+75=150
J. Kirkwood 75+75=150

It may be recalled that Arthur Havers, who failed to qualify for the championship this year, was the last Englishman who succeeded in winning the title.—Reuter.

THAT ARMS EMBARGO

STILL HELD UP BY JAPAN AND ITALY

CONTRACT ISSUE

London, June 26.
Questioned as to the conditions attached by Italy to her acceptance of the arms embargo on Bolivia and Paraguay, Sir John Simon in the House to-day said he understood that the Italian Government had made their acceptance of the contemplated measure conditional upon acceptance by a number of other specified Governments.

As the Italian list included the U.S.S.R. and Japan, invitations were duly transmitted by the League Committee of Three to the Governments of those two countries to participate also.

The Government of the U.S.S.R. had announced their agreement.

The position as regards Japan was that a formal agreement had not yet been given although it has been explained that no exports of arms had, in fact, been sent from Japan to Bolivia or Paraguay.

The Italian Government had also stipulated that current contracts should be exempted from the proposed embargo.

This difficulty had not yet been overcome, though the League Committee of three had recommended that if such a reservation was to be made definite, a very brief time limit should be laid down during which it should be operative.

Sir John Simon added that he had no information as to the duration of existing Italian contracts.

Over thirty countries have declared their agreement in principle with the proposed arms embargo, Italy and Japan being the only two Governments on the list of those approached from which such a declaration has not, as yet, been reached.—British Wireless.
